TRIGGER PHRASES

(sentences that get response) I finally had to basically shame her into (potty training) training bc I was worried she'd be starting Kindergarten and still be in diapers. I hated that.

I'm getting nervous because I wanted him super confident and independent with the potty before pre-K but it's not looking good ughhh (Potty training) It is the worst. It makes me want to lose my mind.

I have a girl. She gives ZERO effs about being wet.

She will be unable to attend her school this Summer if she is not potty trained.

(me yelling) "YOU HAVE TO STAY ON THE POTTY! YOU HAVE TO STAY ON THE POTTY" while my 2 year old cries.

I have six weeks to get him fully potty trained or (we lose our childcare.) he cant go to pre-K

Potty training is the absolute worst. If I could've hired someone to do it, I would've.

When he turns three he'll have to be potty trained in order to move up to the preschool class at daycare.

Potty training days are BORING

Potty Training is Killing Me and Ruining My Marriage

F*CK POTTY TRAINING (respectfully)

Greetings from hell.

I hate potty training

Potty training is the absolute worst. If I could've hired someone to do it, I would've.

We both work and I don't have an alternative for him if that happens. (not being potty trained until pre-K/preschool) potty training is the worst thing i've experienced so far in parenthood.

Potty training is a level of hell for sure.

potty training has had me debating whether or not i want another kid.

potty training might be mine and my partner's demise.

She is SO stubborn.

I am going to try cold turkey - no diapers but the problem is she will cry and scream.

daycare refuses to move her up in classes until she potty trains and I can't enroll her into pre-k until then, either.

METAPHORS

(How they describe the feeling) I'm beyond overstimulated and stressed.

I began panicking about potty training last fall since ... (pre-K starts)
I'm the worst mom. I hate this.

I guess it's kind of a ways away, but I'm still worried he won't be ready.

we're feeling the pressure to make sure she gets the hang of this sooner rather than later

Potty training without success is so frustrating and disheartening!

I felt absolutely betrayed by "oh crap" because it did not work at all for my toddler

Potty training is the part of parenthood that I feel has got me feeling truly defeated

I'm exhausted from the constant hyper-vigilance and power struggles required to keep him dry (...).

The biggest hindrance for me was the frustration

I feel like I'm losing my mind.

(Explaining the mechanism why training underwear works.) Think of getting your period right in your underwear but you're wearing jeans so it all just stays put. It feels gross. That's what this feels like for them.

SCENE DESCRIPTIONS

(specific moments) Standing at daycare pickup while staff hand over a bag of multiple soaked pants

Checking the calendar and counting down: "six weeks left"

Yelling "YOU HAVE TO STAY ON THE POTTY" while child cries

Realizing preschool enrollment depends on this

Child hiding around the corner and peeing on the floor

Opening the daycare app and seeing another accident report

Child ripping off the potty watch mid-scream

Sticker chart hanging ignored on the fridge

Packing extra clothes every single morning "just in case"

Partner giving in because they can't handle the crying

Feeling panic because Deadline is getting closer

Hearing "we can't move her up until she's potty trained"

Watching younger kids move to the next class

Carrying a screaming toddler into a public bathroom while strangers stare

Seeing "regression" stretch from weeks into 6 months

Washing the car seat again because they ran out of spares

Child ripping off the potty watch mid-scream

Offering a Peanut M&M that used to work – now refused

FAILED SOLUTIONS
(what they have tried)

Straight to underwear

Pull-ups/Diapers

Training underwear

Reward like "candy/gummies"/Bribes (sweets, M&M, ...)

3 day (no underwear) method (3day naked method) (well hydrated)

Oh crap (famous potty training book method)

Timer/Potty Watch

Cocomelon potty song

BusyToddler's guide (many different books on that topic)

Sticker charts

Peer Motivation

Daniel Tiger potty episodes

"Just wait until he is ready"

"Let them drink water/juice (alot) so they have to go to the toilet the whole day"

OBJECTIONS

(what stops them) "He's just not ready":

"He's not really showing any interest yet."

"You can't potty train until your child decides it's time."

"Experts say wait for readiness."

"Kids learn at different times."

"Pushing beyond their ability can cause regressions."

"Forcing before developmentally ready leads to issues."

"I don't want to stress him":

"By getting frustrated, we made her feel pressure."

"She associated the potty with a bad thing."

"Pushing too early can cause regressions."

"We made her feel pressure and she associated the potty with a bad thing"

"He just refuses":

"My toddler is impossible to potty train."

"He won't catch on."

"He says he doesn't need to go."

"He pees 60 seconds later."

"Resistance."

"She just can't be bothered."

We've tried everything -> failed solutions

"I'm failing/I don't have the energy":

"I am a bad parent." / "I feel like a failure."

"I'll try again when I regain some energy."

"I don't know how to help my baby."

"Missed the potty training window."

"I don't have it in me."

"It's normal":

"Every child is different."

"Late potty training isn't new."

"There is no right age."

"Some kids take longer."

"It happens at different times."

"Regression is normal."

"We're still having issues/regressions and there's absolutely nothing wrong with my kid"

"My husband gives in"

VILLAIN It's honestly bc of the whole "wait until your child is ready" propaganda from diaper companies
