

Nevaeh Jarvis

4. Februar

Any tips for a toddler who pees on the potty but having a hard time pooping? She's always had hard poops (girl LOVES cheese 😋) dr told me to give her miralax so I did but she keeps pooping a little in her underwear then when I have her sit she says nothing comes out and she wants me to wipe her. Im at a loss on what to do to help her with it. She asks for privacy so I'll leave the room. She hasn't had any pee accidents in weeks.

Anonymes Mitglied

1. Februar

My daughter is 5 1/2 and still wears a pull up at night but she will wake dry some mornings but then will insist that she doesn't have to pee. We were at a party yesterday afternoon she peed there at about 4ish and the that was it for the rest of the night she tried before bed but didn't do anything and now was dry last night and tried this morning but says she doesn't have to pee. I don't want to force the issue as she doesn't have accidents or anything but this seems very abnormal that she could not have to pee after that many hours.

CaringGrape8259

When we need our son to pee we do a counting game. "Let's see who wins! If you can pee before i count to X, you win!" Usually by 4/5 he pees.

We also have the routine of peeing before and after bedtime, or at least sitting on the toilet while the water is running for his bath.

8 Wo.

Antworten

Emma Gant

3. Februar

We have been trying to potty train our newly 4 year old son for the last year. He's likely AuADHD with receptive and expressive speech delays due to ASD and undiagnosed hearing loss for over a year (corrected with tubes at 2.5 years old).

He has pretty minimal interest in using any kind of toilet, but also has no desire to keep a pull up or diaper on once it's no longer clean. He's recently learned the word "potty," but uses it just to label, not to express a need. We've been working with a BCBA who specializes in toileting issues for about 6 months with no real progress.

Butttt, he seems to have a decent amount of control in some ways. About 6 months ago, he stopped going to the bathroom overnight (or while asleep at all) - totally dry every morning, whether he sleeps 7, 8, or 11 hours no matter how much liquid he has before bed. Even after a dry night, we will take him to sit on the toilet for 5-10 minutes and it's rare that he urinates in it (but does not hesitate to urinate on the floor or in underwear/diapers/Pull Ups. He also hasn't peed on me during a diaper/Pull Up change in over a year.

Has anyone else experienced anything like this? We kind of just feel like we are running out of ideas and doing something wrong or missing something totally. He's an only child, totally uninterested in any rewards/charts/PECS cards.

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Potty training consultant here. Staying dry overnight is developmental. This shows his body is able to unconsciously produce less urine and hold on to the urine it does create.

Keep using the cards. Put them on an easily seen wall and use simple language to describe each one.

8 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

4. Februar

.

Hi all, has anyone else experienced this with their little ones? We've been toilet training for 14 months now (hes 4 years and 2 months old now). Within weeks, he was fully trained and going to the toilet but the nursery he was in at the time, kept putting him in nappies which led to our issues. We swapped nurseries after a couple of months (as the old one was ignoring our request to keep him in pants, amongst other issues), and he started school in Sept. He hasn't been in a nappy in the day now since May last year. He goes to the toilet for #2 but #1 is where we're having trouble. He can go days without accidents but then days of constant weeing himself. There's no consistency at all. We've spoken to health visitors that referred us to the family rapid team and we tried everything, and they acknowledged that we've tried everything, but we're still having no luck. We fly to Aus in March, so 24 hour flight and I think I'm going to have to put him in a nappy for the entire time (rather than just "bedtime") as I can't risk him wetting himself and his seat, but I am worried this is just going to cause us further issues down the line but I don't know the alternative. We have 6 weeks before we go so ideally, he'd be fully trained by then, but I'm not hopeful. Any advice/tips? We've resorted to threatening to take something away if he has an accident. Which I really didn't want to do but even the HV and RFT said we've tried everything else, so worth giving it a go, but this hasn't worked either. It's clearly a behavioural issue because he can go on his own for days without accidents and he just chooses not to go on other days. I'm at a loss as to what else I can do. Thanks all!

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Potty training consultant here. Don't threaten. Create a schedule and tell him to go pee every 90 min.

A "plane nappy" will not derail his progress. Simply have him pee at the gate and pop it on him then.

I really don't like PullUps, but this is a case where they make sense for the plane. You could keep him on a regular pee schedule on the plane, understanding that he may choose to pee in the PullUp anyhow, because it is a diaper.

8 Wo.

Antworten
Bearbeitet

Lisa Reimer

1. Februar

.

My stubborn 3.5 year old is finally getting on board for potty training she has been using a small potty for a week now I am wanting to transition her to using a potty seat with the real toilet but I want to try and get something that she will be able to set up herself in case we're busy the left I think would be the sturdiest but I don't know if she will be able to move that and get it in place herself or would the second be better with a step stool but then I worry the step... Mehr anzeigen

Jess Strong StClair

We've had both of these. If I were to choose one, it would be the bear potty- it's easy for them to move and it has ✨ handles and a ladder ✨ built right in! Those circular handles came in so handy when she was climbing up so she didn't have to just grab the toilet seat itself. Plus when she was all done, she could pull it off the toilet, collapse it, and move it over to the sink to use as a stepstool to wash her hands. It was a bigger thing to travel with but honestly, we would have had to bring a stepstool and a potty seat otherwise so it was actually less. Fits inside a standard 13 gallon garbage bag for bringing into places like hotels, etc- easy to clean- yeah. We were really pleased. We transitioned to the other one later on when she started preschool because it was the one they have there. The stepstool is fine with it but I preferred the bear potty. Never underestimate those awesome handles- we still miss those- LOL!

8 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

3. Februar

.

4 year old been potty trained since 2 and 9 months and still having accidents most weeks at nursery. I think she's too scared to ask! She's better at home but still needs a lot of prompting. Is this normal?

Emma Rabin

Top-Beteiligung

Yes, lots of accidents and needing prompting is perfectly normal at 4.

8 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

3. Februar

.

Anyone else struggling to teach your toddler how to pull up their own underwear and pants? My son is almost 4 and really struggling with this.

Melissa Jones

My little boys 4 & would always say mummy do it. In nursey they would make out there hands are busy so he would have to. He does it himself in the house now to

8 Wo.

Antworten

Sasha Poland

3. Februar

.

Hello everyone!

Here are the details in regards to me and Amanda Brennan's potty training education webinar that will be taking place on 2 dates, February 19th and February 26th at 8pm EST! Please use the QR link down below to sign up as we are capping each presentation to 35 participants to allow for a Q & A at the end. We will also not be recording these presentations as this is a free resource and part of a student doctoral capstone project.

A couple of other details:

*These presentations are for educational purposes only and do not replace medical advice.

*There will be no occupational therapy-specific education and interventions in this presentation as not all of our viewers will be from the state of Michigan. This goes against the Michigan OT licensure compact. We apologize for this inconvenience.

Anonymes Mitglied

2. Februar

.

4 year old keeps pooing in her undies

My 4yo daughter has been toilet trained since 18 months, has never had wee accidents. Poop is a completely different story. She was fully toilet trained poop included for maybe 3 months. Then something changed and she would just hide to poo in her undies. We have tried everything, back in pull ups so we could start fresh, punishments, rewards, lots of praise, back to using a potty while we read her books, letting her have the iPad while she poops, absolutely NOTHING we do has helped. About a year and a half ago (6 months after this started) we had to take her to hospital for severe impaction because she was withholding for days, sometimes up to a week. She was on strong laxatives for a week and got completely cleaned out (I've never seen so much shit in my life 🤢). She did slightly better after this, going a couple of weeks with minimal accidents and going once or twice a day on the potty. Then, she started withholding again because she started Kindergarten and she was “too busy to go to the toilet”, we did the laxitives again, twice more over the first 6 months she was at kindy but she still refuses to poop there so the constipation keeps happening!! Just to clarify, her poops aren’t hard at all ever, they’re completely normal. When we ask her if she’s pooping because we notice when she’s starting to push, she tells us “no”. We pick her up straight away and sit her on the potty, sometimes she will release but most of the time she won’t! We are back to 5-6 days without going on average because she keeps withholding. I am at my wits end. She’s supposed to be toilet trained at kindergarten so they’re not working with us at all to help the situation. She starts school right at the start of next year and she absolutely cannot be having accidents by then! If youve got this far, I 💙 u! Does anyone have any advice or are in the same position?

Sarah Livermore

Top-Beteiligung

Yes, did you already implement everything from this one page guide?

You are already doing a few things mentioned in the guide but really what you need are some kickstarter successes. Those first few releases that you can build on (and celebrate). Also sometimes when kids are still denying it there still too much shame around it altogether.

The best (one page) guide anywhere on poop training is on the PottyFriend site. (There's a promo code that makes it free: MAKEITFUN) written by a Licensed Therapist. I'll try to link it here. Xx

8 Wo.

Antworten
Bearbeitet

Kelsey Weinmann

3. Februar

I'm about to give up. My 3.5 year old was doing so well and suddenly is having multiple accidents everyday. I've literally done everything. At this point it feels like she's going to college in diapers.

Anonymes Mitglied 365

Totally get it. I feel the exact same way and my daughter is 4. Never thought that I would still be doing this. So frustrating and hard to understand. Hang in there!

8 Wo.

Antworten

Angie Davidson

26. Januar

.

I am at my wits end. My 3 year old, will be 4 in March, won't go to the potty. He will do really well one day and then the next its like he forgets what he needs to do. We've tried food, toys, trips and nothing seems to work to get him to go. All my husband does is yell at him if he goes in his pull up. I try to talking through it with him and try to make it fun but nothing works. I need help because im starting to feel like something is wrong with him.

Anna Hooley

Well if he's wearing a pull-up he knows it's made to pee and poop in. It's not fair to expect him not to use it if he's wearing a pull-up. Switch to underwear and you should start to see him having more success.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Steffie Kanatzar

1. Februar

Any tips on getting a 4yr old boy to release on the potty? He won't tell me if he needs to pee or had an accident. He will sit on the potty then go in his underwear.

Agnes Klimowski

I got some of those pee sticker things that reveal a picture if pee goes on them and it got my girl (who was previously afraid of releasing) more excited about peeing to see the "magic"

9 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

1. Februar

My daughter is 4 year.she is potty trained but there are times she wont tell or before she tells or reach toilet she juat poop.Also when she is in playground she will play amd wont tell ,till she dis in her panty.

How is help her with that?

OptimisticKoala4758

When mine is busy playing I have to remind her every couple of hours or so or she'll have an accident

9 Wo.

Antworten

Lauren Tompkins Carrano

1. Februar

How do I get my 3 yr old to go potty on a public toilet? I bought one of those portable folding potty seats and bring it wherever we go, she will sit on it but will not go when I know she has to go cause she tells me beforehand she has to go. She'll be starting school soon so this is gonna be a problem if she can't go on the public toilet. She is potty trained at home

Anonymes Mitglied

1. Februar

My 3.5 year old was doing great over summer with going 1 and 2 but unfortunately we weren't consistent and she regressed.

Since then she has flat out refused to go potty. We've done the no clothes/diaper method, offered all types of rewards, put less pressure, and she will literally hold it all day for up to 10 hours until it's bedtime and I end up putting a diaper on her to sleep. Does anyone have tips? She will be starting preschool soon and I'd love to stop buying pull-ups soon 😭

Anonymes Mitglied 265

Waterproof pad underneath her at night and no more pull-ups/diapers. She will stop holding it if she knows she won't be getting any diapers anymore

9 Wo.

Antworten

Heather Spurrier

1. Februar

Ok so my daughter is 3.5 and autistic. She is totally doing awesome at peeing on the potty at home IF she has on no bottoms. If she has on undies or pants or pull up she will just go in those and take them off. Poo is still a work in progress but that's ok. Any advice on how to get her to go to the potty before having an accident with bottoms on?

OptimisticKoala4758

Remind her every hour or set timers until she gets the hang of it.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

30. Januar

Hi, I'm giving away this book if anybody is interested. I am in Vancouver, Washington. Please response if you would like it.

Anonymes Mitglied

Verfasser/in Sure!

9 Wo.

Antworten

Jessica Mae

31. Januar

.

My daughter turned 3 in September have been in and off potty training since she turned two. I'm at my wits end with it 😞 been going strong for almost a month this go around and I can't get this child to potty for the life of me. I'm so tired of cleaning up pee and she still begs for a pull up to poop in. She knows what to do just doesn't want to at this point and in at a loss I feel so defeated

Taz Sinead Onofrio

Same! My daughter nearly 4! Xx 😞😞😞

9 Wo.

Antworten
Bearbeitet

Ioana Crina

▪ Folgen

30. Januar

.

My girl is 5,7 and still not going by herself to the toilet.

She will do when we take her, but if we don't, she will do on herself.

We take care all the time.

I feel helpless at this point.

Audrey Peña

I'm assuming you've cleared any possible medical issues with her pediatrician. If so then she's old enough now that you need to start rewarding her when she uses the toilet and punishing her when she doesn't.

Be VERY clear and tell her what the consequence will be the next time she goes on herself.

"If you go on yourself you'll lose 5 minutes of TV time that day." Or whatever her joy currency is. Then calmly follow through even if she tantrums.

"I told you exactly what would happen. I know! I want you to be able to watch TV too, but it's more important for you to use the toilet."

9 Wo.

Antworten

Courtney Sierakowski

28. Januar

I need help.

I have twins who will be 4 in May. My problem is that in September they will attend kindergarten and they need to be 100% potty trained and able to wipe themselves. There is no help by educators in toileting (Ontario, Canada)

One child is 100% potty trained and just needs to learn how to wipe.

My other son is 100% pee trained and will go independently. In August he was beginning to have bowel movements on the toilet and he was so proud of himself. After the birth of my daughter on August 17th he stopped and refuses to poo on the toilet. He will hide somewhere in the house.

I really want to get him back on the toilet but I dont know where to start. He freaks out and wants to hide. He knows he's supposed to go on the toilet and says next time he will, but then goes and hides. I've had to put him back in a pull up because the underwear is getting expensive.

Help? I dont know where to start.

Amber Ross

Had had to put out a small potty in her preferred spot to start and get over the fear and then gradually moved it closer. Also talked about using the big potty once the BM was over and not in fight or flight anymore

9 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

30. Januar

.

Hello! My 4 year old still poops her pants every single day. We have tried everything we could think of to encourage her to go on the potty, but unfortunately pooping in her underwear is our norm. I brought her to a pediatrician last year and got a referral for PT. Curious if any of you have tried this and if so, if it worked? Thanks!

Erika Raines

Check out Cori Stern on social media. I found her on FB. She is a child behavioral specialist. She can help! It's all about your communication with your child and regulating their nervous system. It has worked for me so far. It's a slow process but I promise there is hope.

9 Wo.

Antworten

GreenFox7510

29. Januar

.

If this is not allowed then you can delete. I got a preview of what it's like to have a threenager in public yesterday. This may be my least favorite age!!! My daughter turned 3 on January 12

Bailey Adkins

My son turns three in March and we are already entering this. It was like a light switched. Being 8 months pregnant, I am struggling at parenting the productive way with this behavior 🤔😅

9 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

30. Januar

.

She has perfected the potty, no accidents in a while. But she isn't good at pulling up pants or undies she rather be naked how can I fix this ?

Emma Rabin

Top-Beteiligung

Start with a skirt and no undies, the very loose fitting undies.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

23. Januar

.

I'm posting Anonymous as last time I posted i felt like I was being judged 😞😞

Okay so my now 4yr old we have started toilet training 10 days now I was following the 3 day method. But anyways I have attempted several I have tried:

- Naked from waist down (she would get a nappy and put it on herself) (even if i hide them she will find them still)
- Watching for her cues
- I've out the UpAiry underpants.
- Put her on the toilet/potty
- Ask her and she refuses

Anyways my last this is i dont ask her if she needs to go toilet i just take her and put her on it. So She will sit on the toilet or potty and do NOTHING then we/she will then take her off and pull up pants and she will pee.

We dont make a fuss and then say oh dear you have wet your pants or something along those lines and she will say it wasn't me change her and the repeats.....

When she sits on the potty/toilet we praise her etc...

I have been told putting feet into warm water will help I haven't tried that.

But please can someone help.

Anonymes Mitglied 678

It's only been 10 days. Keep going. Every day.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

30. Januar

Hi all thanks for the add 😊

My daughter is 3 years & a month old. I've been potting training her since she was 2 years old. She's fully trained with peeing on the toilet.

She got badly constipated when she was 2.5 years old so the GP put her on movicol which made her get bad diarrhoea everyday, every second of the day so GP took her off it. She has now developed a fear of pooing due to the pain & will hold it in for days & complain of her tummy being sore &/or her bum being sore. All of her underwear are stained due to having wet farts from holding it in. When she tells us she wants to poo on the toilet we take her but she'll sit there & cry & scream the bathroom down saying she wants to poo in her nappy but never does. So I've put her back on movicol the last 3 days & she finally done a poo after 5 - 6 days holding it in & refusing to poo, I've stopped the movicol again for now due to bad diarrhoea & having accidents in her underwear at daycare. She's only done 3 poo's on the toilet since the age of 2. We've rewarded her in these times just like we did with pees on the toilet.

Just wondering if anyone has been through this or similar & how did you go about it?

I don't know how to help her & the fear she's getting when it comes to pooing & you can hear the fear in her cry which breaks my heart 😞 been back to the doc & he just said she'll grow out of it as its her age. Any tips, advice or even of recommend docs who can help with this situation would be much appreciated.

Anonymes Mitglied

30. Januar

At my wits end now my little boy will be 4 next week and still refuses to poo on the toilet some mornings I manage to sit him on and he does it but others he refuses and will just poo his pants tried everything sticker charts sweets praise books nothing works paediatrician gave him laxido can't get him to drink it and last time she gave liquid senna which the small dose doesn't work and the big dose makes it too runny feel like he will be going to school not trained at this point please help

Garrett Burton

26. Oktober 2025

 Updates

He is going 2-4 times a day in his potty. When we ask him to stay dry at pre-k school(he wont do public bathrooms yet)he does and then right when he gets home he pees. Still accidents at night and he wont tell us when he has to go but this is progress right?

My son is 4 and won't go potty in the potty. Our oldest took a bit to get potty trained as well but our youngest is defiant. He fights back on sitting even though he has an occasion or two where he went, granted that was a few months back. We have offered rewards to go, a sticker chart, making it fun and so on. Any other tips? I know they say when they are ready it all clicks and that's how our oldest was but this little dude just refuses to do the potty. ss

Sara McCarter

No necessary advice - but I'm with you. I have 4 yo twins. One woke up his 3rd birthday saying he needed to pee in toilet and did! Within a few weeks he was pee trained. A few more months poo trained.

The other is pee trained most days unless he's too busy (just in the past few months). But he usually refuses to sit for poops. Diagnosed with encopresis, but also he just refuses to sit lately to try.

Meanwhile our 21mo girl sits and goes and shows intermittent interest the past few months. I do believe they do it when ready too. Sadly not there yet with one 4yo 😞

23 Wo.

Antworten

Emma McNicol

29. Januar

Hi, my 3 year old- nearly 4. Is point blank refusing to poop. Every time he needs to go he holds. He picks at his food, completely miserable and cries every time he witholds. He is now waking every 30 mins crying but i can't even get him near the potty. He is on 2 sachets of laxative a day and its definietly not hard. I have tried everything, star charts, rewards, bribery, getting him to sit for periods, distraction, pull ups. He holds for 7 days and we go through 48 hours of hell for the last few days. Now in our 4th week. Does anyone have any experience or ideas?

Anonymes Mitglied 290

I got a trampoline to workout on and my daughter ended up jumping on it too and helps her to go. 3 min gets the lymphatic system moving which is what is helping her. We were doing laxatives but have stopped them since she now jumps to her fave song and then goes poop

9 Wo.

Antworten

PastelPomelo2891

29. Januar

Hi, I have a 2 year old (3 in March) and ever since he was about 23 months he showed signs of readiness. I never did a strict potty training but introduced him to the potty and he took to it very well, had a few accidents here and there but got the hang of it when he was about 28 months(July last year).

We moved In August and I had a baby September and it's like we're going back to the beginning.

He wets his pants at least 3 times a day. Never goes to the potty unless you ask him to and even then would argue that he doesn't need to go when he's obviously wiggly. Poops in his pants as well. Wakes up during nap/night and pees or Poops in bed and just lies in the mess till you come into his room, even though his potty is right beside his bed. He's very advanced in every other aspect and can have a full conversation with complete comprehension of what you're saying.

He repeats all the time that you poop and pee on the potty but he doesn't actually do it anymore. I don't know what else to do, I've tried everything short of starting potty training from scratch. I know they regress when there has been an big change but it has been 5 months of this now and I'm exhausted. Please I need any suggestions on how to handle this. TIA x

Rangoli Purohit

29. Januar

.

Hi my son is 3.5 year old is have been trying to potty training him for months now.Although he poops on the potty and pees when I take him to the toilet but does not tell me when he needs to go.

He does not wet his pants because I keep taking him to the toilet within an hour.

He keeps hiding behind the curtain when he wants to potty that's when I take him to the toilet.He communites all other things except this and iam frustrated.

What should I do to make him tell me.

Please help me.

Anonymes Mitglied

29. Januar

Hi everyone

My son is 4 yr old Non verbal, he has few words that he does not use to communicate his wants

When we started training, I showed him daniels tiger potty song episode and bought him the book

It has been 5 weeks since, he does poo and pee in potty

He is doing very well, at first he was getting me a diaper to communicate he had to go to potty

Then he started handing me over the book when he had to go

Now as soon as he has to pee he runs to me to hand lead me to toilet or goes by himself and stand in there until I come.

I am in process of teaching him to take his pant off and climb on potty

Today he had his first poo accident, he came to find me

When he couldn't he ran upstairs to look and had poo accident, took his oant off and there was poo everywhere on carpet.

I am thinking of making him a communication card or the button to press when he had to go

I dont know what other way I can teach to tell me or my husband when he had to go. He never goes to his dad, he runs to me at last minute, if I dont take him straight away he wil have accident.

Just to mention he has severe form of eczema, I cant keep him pant free.

He is doing so well, I feel like I am failing to teach him to communicate

I am working with his OT to get some ideas regarding this

I would really appreciate anyone has any tips pls

Thank you

GenuineApricot347

28. Januar

Hey, my 3 year old is showing all the signs for potty training. However, he does have frequent accidents and my partner ends up putting a nappy on him whenever I'm away (I.e- gone food shop or attending to younger toddler). What do I do?

Anonymes Mitglied 538

Leave a potty in the room and leave a nappy off him. Explain that its there his weewee and poo goes. Just let him try it out by sitting on it when he wants. Make a little fuss when he does so he starts to understand that he's doing a good job. Even if he doesn't do anything on it at first.

9 Wo.

Antworten

OptimisticKoala4758

28. Januar

My newly 5 year old is all of sudden regressing having pee accidents after being fully potty trained for over six months. I feel like I'm losing my mind and becoming angry because she's choosing to pee in her underwear and this started when we're at home for a long stretch of time. It took me forever (since 18 months off and on again) to get her consistently peeing in the toilet and now she's regressing! I'm sick of the accidents!

Jen Turkish

28. Januar

My almost 5 year old son(next mo) had been pee trained since Oct 2024 so over a year with really no accidents. At night he would ask for a diaper to poop and then i would change to out new one to sleep.

Wakes up diaper wet. Last three of for days says he doesn't need diapers anymore, still hasn't pooped in potty but I put him to bed with underwear. Woke up at midnight wet and I put the diaper on. Of course he had poop in the am. Following night did diaper at night again and then decided let's try this again. Did underwear last night and he woke up at 2 am wet(.refuses to pee before getting tired and going to bed) tried to put new underwear at 2 am on he pulled them off but this point I'm just tired and put diaper back on. He had a poop again in am so he's holding poop at night for now and waking up wet with the underwear. Where do I start to improve this

My oldest took longer to poop in potty to by 4ish but stayed dry overnight so he didn't get the diaper for sleep

My youngest a girl at 3 just got it right away for me the girl she was super easy!

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Your best bet is to hire a potty training consultant like me.

There's a number of things happening here and it's going to take some work to get your little on the right path.

Thankfully, it can be done.

9 Wo.

Antworten

GreenFox7510

28. Januar

My daughter got to pick out new panties at Target yesterday bc she has been dry for a week. (Not including nap and overnight—still in pull-ups for those and probably will be for a bit) Proud of my girl! Rocking the potty training 😊 She just turned 3 on January 12. This group has really helped a ton!

Ebony Soutter

28. Januar

my son is 4 and non verbal i want to potty train him now as we tried in the past and he wasnt interested as he used to suffer from constipation now he sometimes take interest but sometimes doesnt want to sit on the potty at all he tends to cry not wanting to sit please help with any tips

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Make a commitment and do it. Loads of people dislike change, but this one is non-negotiable.

You can buy ASD cards on Amazon so that you can point and explain each step.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Brianna Morris

28. Januar

My son is 4 years old and we just started potty training the other week when he started showing interest. He's been in underwear and will go potty with a couple accidents a day. But most of the time he only goes because we set a timer for every 15 minutes (sometimes he goes on his own but not all the time). About how long does it usually take until kids go completely on their own with no timer or reminders? He starts PREK this fall and they need him to be completely potty trained..

Emma Rabin

Top-Beteiligung

Reminders are perfectly normal at his age.

However you should start increasing the time, do 20 minutes the half an hour, and so on.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

27. Januar

.

My daughter starts to hold poop, i went to emergency they prescribed movicol pedetric, i did give her yesterday is did workout,and im keep continue give her,im just wondering if someone had this how long is take you to come out of this and start potty training?

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Potty training consultant here. I would wait a month past the hospital visit and then train her. Most kids need a month to get over something like that. She'll likely still withhold and your best bet is to work with a potty training consultant like me. And yes, I have worked with families overseas - as far away as New Zealand in fact.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Keisha DeAngelo

22. Januar

.

Hi everyone,

My son is 3 years 2 months and I'm trying to start the process of potty training. This is my second child, but my first boy. I think he's ready to start the process and I know many will recommend having him be naked. However, my issue is finding underwear he likes. He despises pull ups. I've bought training underwear that has the thicker, absorbent layer front to back. I've also bought regular underwear and boxers briefs. He hates them all. They either feel too tight or too scratchy. I've bought all different sizes and nothing makes him happy. He's rather wear the pull up style diapers. Does anything have any tired and true underwear brands their kids love? My oldest was so easy to potty train and I'm starting to think I'm doing something wrong

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

And no, you're not doing anything wrong. PullUps are simply fancy diapers and won't help your kiddo potty train, since they are simply too good at wicking moisture away from the body.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Amy Rachael

24. Januar

Has anyone discovered their child isnt potty trained yet because it's a neurological issue where the brain doesn't get the message that the body has to go? Hope I explained this right haha

Jemma Cecil

We thought we had that because my daughter never even seemed to notice when she was wet or soiled, or even feel herself doing it. But then we tried potty training with no pants for 3 days at home, and she ended up noticing her body after that. It took quite a few accidents and we did take her ourselves every 30mins for the first day. Something about not having pants on triggered her to realise bodily functions and be more aware of her body. She has trouble following instructions and listening as well so we'd literally march her to the toilet or potty and sit her down.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Nina Reische

26. Januar

Anyone else's kids seem to have sort of an attachment to diapers? My 3.5yo would rather change her own diaper than wear underwear.

We just had a very successful weekend with underwear and today it's back to screaming bloody murder because she wants a diaper instead. I'm feeling so confused and defeated 😭

Tammy Montebello

My son is same age and also was determined to keep pull ups on, I persuaded him to swap his pull ups for silky pants aka boxer shorts, he said yes and next day I took him to the shop to buy them, made up some monster truck sticker charts and he's almost 2 weeks no pull ups day or night, I went cold turkey with nappies. It is costing me in monster trucks but worth it in the end, also after a day or two he wouldn't put a pull up on because the silky shorts are more comfy.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

26. Januar

Our daughter will be 4 years old in 3 months and potty training has been difficult. We started her training well over a year ago. Then we got pregnant again. The pregnancy derailed her training, and she's regressed more since becoming a big sister. We started potty training her again in early December. She wears underwear during the day and pees on the potty. She wears a pull up overnight. She has had only 1 poop accident at daycare. She has never pooped on the potty at daycare. At home, she was peeing on the potty regularly and we had a routine, but lately she resists and puts up a fight to even pee on the potty. She has never pooped on the potty. She knows what she's supposed to do, but instead holds it in and our only option winds up being to put a pull up on her and to let her poop in it. But even with a pull up on she will sometimes go a couple of days without pooping and be in constant discomfort. This also has impacted her bedtime routine. We have a sticker chart that's covered from dozens upon dozens of successful pees, and we have special stickers for poop that haven't been used. We also have a treasure box with small special toys for her and larger toys as well to give her if she sits on the potty with or without the pull up and poops. We even offer her the special snacks she likes if she poops on the potty. We've had 2 successful poops on the potty while wearing a pull up. That's it. She does not seem to care about getting rewards anymore and will hold the poop in, forcing us to use a pull up.

There's more that I could share but I believe I've gotten the point across. We are at a loss with how to get her to succeed. She is supposed to go to Pre K in September and they don't allow diapers or pull ups.

Any help or advice would be unbelievably appreciated.

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Potty training consultant here. Your best bet is to reach out to someone like me for help. This is fixable.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Paulina Gregorek

27. Januar

Hi. My 3 yo son was potty trained for almost years, waking up with dry nappy. He's got now his little sister almost 3 months old and from 2nd of January he suddenly started having regression and doing everything in his pants even at home next to the potty that is in our living room. Anyone else had something similar, how did you get back on track?

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Yup. Find time every day to focus solely on him. Pick him up and cuddle him like a baby. Some parents have called this "Mama Love." Let him know that you love him very much.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Brittany Anderson

28. Januar

Ok we finally were making progress with my 4 year old potty training besides school because they don't have the staff to put him on a schedule right now. He has started pooping and peeing himself again. Is this normal?

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Unfortunately, yes. Your best bet is to meet face-to-face with the director of the preschool and explain that your kiddo needs to be taken to the potty before all major activity changes, before/after meals and before/after he is taken outside for recess.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

23. Januar

My 4 year old will not tell me when she needs to pee or poop. We've gotten rid of pull-ups and she only wears underwear but she'll still pee n poop in the underwear, and it's almost like it doesn't even bother her.

What can I do to help her to tell me when she's gotta go.

Angelica Mulgrew

So I read online that some children are afraid of going to the bathroom for poop because they are nervous about the poop dropping and the sensation of it. I put my kids small potty out and put a maxi pad in it and tried to get the kids to poop in it because it isn't too much of a drop to the maxipad so it's less scary and it worked

10 Wo.

Antworten

Adriana Humphrey

27. Januar

I plan on starting to potty train my 3.5 year old son this following spring. For any parents that have multiple kiddos, especially an older kid that is in school, how did you go about potty training your little. I've knkw with my oldest it was easier to stay home all week and stick to training but with my son having speech therapy and having to pick up my other child, how can I stick to a good routine for him that would help and benefit him and help him stay on track?

Anna Wells

Im the grandma but took my grandson for 3 full days and used the 3 day method. Worked really well. A few accudents. By the end of day 3 he pooped on potty. He wears underwear during the day and pull-ups for sleep. Only problem is he holds poop until he gets a pull-up. Can't seem to get him to poop on potty anymore. So when weather warms up we're doing away with pull-up and using pee pads on mattress for sleep in the hopes he abandons holding it in and gives in to going on potty.

9 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

24. Januar

Help needed!

I CANNOT go through this any longer with my 5 year old (and my husband).

5 year old poops while he's playing and it sits in his undies/bum MULTIPLE times a day or it falls out as he's running around and we find poop on the floor. He will just ignore the fact that he stinks and doesn't seem to care. His younger siblings (4 & 2 years old) will constantly tattle on him that he smells/has poop in his undies.

He has told me he doesn't know when he poops and I don't know if he truly doesn't know if it's just an excuse.

He's been working on this for over a year. Doctor said "it's normal" and some boys take longer to train.

The worst part is my husband is getting so frustrated and angry with him.

We've tried having him sit on the toilet regularly but he doesn't always go when he's sitting there. It's kinda cold here to try to just do naked bum all day..

Anonymes Mitglied 822

I would talk to a pediatric therapist. My now 7yo had major regressions several times through the course of potty training. To the point where it became a medical necessity. Doctor sent us straight to therapy because it was all mental and our parenting reactions were a contributing factor. Mind you we literally got this resolved slowly over the last year or so. I wish I had gone to the doc sooner because having an objective 3rd party talk with her was a huge part of us getting over that hump. Hope that helps, goodluck!!!!

9 Wo.

Antworten

Leah Mehri

21. Januar

My son is 4.5 years and peeing in potty no problem but pooping has been the hardest. He is scared to do it and holds it until I have other choice to put him in diaper or give him a laxative and he holds it for days. Now he's peeing at home he won't tell the teacher in his preschool that he needs to pee and uses the diaper. I want him potty trained how can I do this? It's been very difficult and he'll be 5 in June. Any suggestions?

Leah Mehri

Verfasser/in

Update: Today he pooped in the potty first time without getting scared. He said it's not hard or scared it's easy. He's been want a toy he loves so I bought coming tomorrow. How can I keep up with the him to constantly keep doing it? How to get him to do it in his preschool? As he's scared to use the bathroom outside our home or without me.

9 Wo.

Antworten
Bearbeitet

Ella Barbaka

26. Januar

.

Stubborn, battle month 3 🤨

My 3.5yo is ok to pee after the bath while barebum but he will NOT take his nappy off mid day just to pee not to mention #2. He will NOT go to bed without a nappy, he begs me to put on a nappy hour after bath.

Started in nursery with training pants - golden boy 🏆 Comes home in dry training pants, holds till last and lets it all out in training pants and cries for a cuddle 😭

What are my next options? Bribing?

Judi Austin

19. Januar

Hi my son is 7 1/2, fully potty trained #1 and #2 all day but still has to have an overnight pullup which is full each morning. I have tried explaining to him to try to stay dry until tomorrow. I've tried restricting fluids after 6pm (he goes to bed around 8:30 each night and sleep very well) but continues to get up soaked wet. I really don't know how to potty train for over night. Suggestions welcome.

ExcitingCaribou8488

26. Januar

Nighttime training advice

My almost 4 year old has been potty trained for about 10 months. Occasionally has accidents, mostly from waiting too long, but overall doing great. How do I help him with nighttime training? He's still in a pull-up at night because he's still wet most nights. He only wakes up if he wets through the pull up, which doesn't happen too often, but otherwise he sleeps right through.

Jo Smith

25. Januar

Does anyone have any advice for a very stressed out mother please?

My daughter is 4 and is potty trained but hardly ever done a poo on the potty always in her pants. The doctors think she is constipated so put her on movicol but been on it over a year with no improvements at all. I don't know what to do with her and it's getting so difficult to go anywhere with her as she has so many accidents through the day.

Please help if you have any ideas. Thank you 😊

Anonymes Mitglied 441

So my son was the same, as we where going through the potty training it was getting harder and harder to deal with and tbh I felt like a complete failure watching all my friends kids of similar age and kids at daycare managing to hack the toilet pretty quick. I ended up in and out of the doctors and to a specialist. We covered everything and tried everything, as a last resort I toke him to see an osteopath and to my complete amazement it has helped us massively!!

He had to blockages either side of his stomach connected to his intestines stopping movement and all the natural body fluids from flowing.

Since then the number 2 have been everyday and on the toilet, we still have a long way to go as he is very shy about it but since going we have only had a handful of accidents. I have been taking him monthly and finally feel like we are getting somewhere. Hope this helps.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

26. Januar

☀️ New Mom Alert! ☀️ Fellow tired but happy parents, I'm a brand-new mama crafting magical storybook videos & audios for my tot, turning learning into musical adventures! 🎵 📖 ✨ Poems that soothe, lullabies for dreamy nights, fun healthy eating songs, good manners jams, and more, all in cute storybook style your kids will dance on! Started for my little one, but sharing with every toddler out there. Join the fun. Like, Share, Subscribe:
https://www.youtube.com/channel/UCILGBJ0hhu_Ug0zc6FVO5Og

What all fun songs do your kiddos need? Drop ideas & help this new mom thrive in baby bliss! ❤️ #MomLife
#StorybookSongs #ToddlerMagic

Anonymes Mitglied

23. Januar

Pls help! My just turned 4year old will not poo in the potty. I have tried everything!! She has been pee trained since 3 & did it sooo easily. She is also night trained but for the life of us she simply will not go poo in potty. I tried all methods. She will hold her poo & it cause more issues. She hides in her closet & will hold poo in bum & empty it in toilet then wipe her self. This has been going on for months now. I put a small toilet in her closet she won't even try. I make it fun encouraging but im at my Witt's end. She has a little bit of constipation issues but I think it's simply from holding her poo as a festr to go. Pls any & all advice

Anna Hooley

Keep her bottomless and don't leave her alone at all until she poops in the potty.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

25. Januar

Looking for reassurance and confidence around restarting toilet training 💙

I'm a first time mum to a sensitive little boy who's just turned 4, and I'm really struggling to find the confidence to restart toilet training.

My son just won't "let go" to pee or poo on the toilet or potty. Our first attempt came to a very abrupt end because he was so distressed.. he kept telling me he "shouldn't pee", crying and crying, and would only go in a pull-up while being held and cuddled. It was heartbreaking, and honestly quite overwhelming.

I'm finding it mentally really hard to start again, knowing how much fear and discomfort there was last time. A lot of this seemed to escalate after he had a couple of quite big pee accidents at nursery, which I think knocked his confidence too.

I'd really appreciate hearing from anyone who's been through something similar.. especially with sensitive or anxious children and how you found the confidence to try again, or whether waiting longer helped. 🧡

Thank you so much.

Tori Grieves

• Folgen

20. Januar

.

Hello,

Long time reader of posts, first time poster...

So recently, over Christmas break, we decided to dive head first into no bottoms potty training. It went WONDERFULLY! My 3 yr old is still having a few accidents sporadically but my 5 yr old (he's autistic and refused to do this prior to now) has been ABSOLUTELY NAILING IT! I'm so incredibly proud.

!?! Here's my question !?!

He's waking up dry everyday and even waking me to tell me he has to go potty, I've been still putting a pull up on for bed. How long of him doing this until I can let him go to bed pull up free, and if he wakes up dry can I reuse the pull up the next night or should I toss it? Seems like a waste tossing a dry pull up but I have been doing that so far... Just curious if you'd reuse or toss?

Thank you if you read this far 🧡

April Johnson

I personally reuse my pull ups if my kids wake up dry from nap and bedtime.

I would say if he's three weeks dry and goes first thing in the morning or after nap, he should be okay with no pull ups.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Maria Rose

20. Januar

Hi, so overall doing really good in pants less method I'm wondering how do I get her to voice when she has to go? I'm going to try and start undies now but I'm a little nervous about ever having to go out, she doesn't voice she needs to go. For now I've been avoiding going out and if we do I make sure the pee was done before leaving and still put a diaper just in case but I know this is just me and we should stop it for undies. What can I do?

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Potty training consultant here. Have her go potty and then leave the house.... Mehr anzeigen

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

22. Januar

Our son just turned 3 a bit over a month ago. He refuses to sit on the potty or toilet (we have tried everthing with different seats and pottys etc) he doesnt want to sit on it without pants atleast. He also has never minded his diapers and he doesn't tell us when he has done anything in his diaper. (He might have autism but mild, we are with professionals but still not an official diagnosis yet) does anyone know what to do???

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Potty training consultant here. Pick a week, clear your schedule, go absolutely nowhere and commit to potty training.

Have him be naked from the waist down and catch the pee in a small potty when he starts to go.

Also, get flashcards to put on the wall by the bathroom. Take him into the bathroom when you go and point to each action in the pottying process as you do it. Narrate what you are doing too.

It can be done, even with kiddos on the spectrum.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

25. Januar

Anyone have some tips or tricks to help with regression. This is the 3rd time my daughter has done this and she's now 4.

Unfortunately I believe the main reason for her regression this time is my ex husband and I got divorced a few months back. Secondly we pulled her out of her preschool due to some mistreatment the staff had toward my daughter so she's been homeschooling with her grandparents since last October.

She wears underwear... Mehr anzeigen

Danielle Lynn

You have not failed hun by any means. Things like this happen. Just start again. One step at a time.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Karly Forbes

25. Januar

.

Underwear or pull ups

My daughter showed significant improvement with potty training over the weekend and is wearing potty training padded underwear. She still has accidents when she doesn't make it to the bathroom in time (she has to decide to go on her own, if we remind her or ask her she refuses and gets mad). A few times a day she literally makes it to the bathroom and potties in her pants. Should I send her to preschool on Tuesday in a pull up or underwear? She goes for 3 hours so I was thinking underwear and extra pants?

Renee Franklin

Ask the school. As they get more distracted at school and don't make it to the toilet. My boy is almost fully trained at home in undies but in pull ups at daycare as he needs to get someone to open the bathroom and can't make it in time. They don't want to deal with mess

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

23. Januar

My son is 3, and we're in the middle of potty training. At home he actually does pretty well. We have two potties, one in the living room and one in the bathroom, and most of the time he'll go pee on his own. He usually tells me when he has to go, but if he's with anyone else, he won't say anything.

Pooping is where we're really stuck. He's scared to poop in the potty. He will poop, but not in a normal way. Everyone says to potty train when they're "ready," but honestly, I don't know what that even looks like. One week he'll pee on the potty or toilet all week and only poop in his overnight diaper, he holds it until it's painful. Then the next week, he won't go near the potty at all.

Sarah Livermore

Top-Beteiligung

Hi mama, poop training can take months even with all of the right strategies. The best (one page) guide i found anywhere on poop training is on the PottyFriend site. (There's a promo code that makes it free: MAKEITFUN) written by a Licensed Therapist. I'll try to link it here. Xx

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

23. Januar

My little boy is 3 turning 4 at the end of April we've been toilet training since summer holidays last year. He shows signs of being ready and can be really good at home. He started telling us more when he needed the potty and even took himself there on his own. He is often pantsless when he does this.

However the accidents happen as soon as we're out of the house especially at nursery. He's had times at nursery where he's said he needed a wee but not quite made it to the potty in time but other times he just wets himself and doesn't say anything. I should also note he does and a speech delay so can struggle with his communication and I don't if this is also delaying toilet training?

We've had multiple accidents a day at a nursery over the last few weeks of him going back into underwear.

What should we do? Do we put him back in pull ups and try again later or keep doing what we're doing and hope it's just clicks.

Any advice or similar situations would be appreciated 😊

Angela Collis

Following as in the same situation

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

24. Januar

.

Good day mom's

I need urgent help, and advise,

Please.

My 3 almost 4 year old girl. Refuse to sit on the potty long enough to pee or poo. Please help?

OptimisticKoala4758

Keep reminding her and taking her eventually she'll go! Mine took a long time before she actually peed on the toilet. Try singing to her or getting her to blow bubbles anything to help her relax if you're already doing that then it's just a matter of time!

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

24. Januar

.
Got a travel potty off the local fb group for outings in the warmer weather and of course she wanted to try it out when we got home. She looked so uncomfortable on it, only just managing to position herself so hed wee went in it. It was almost full after she used it and no way i could close the lid! So we would literally have to empty where we were, which depending where you were could leave you in a bit of a predicament. Anyone else had similar or have i just got a child with a massive bladder!? For the record shes 4 but recently potty trained and sometimes doesnt give us much warning of needing a wee

Emma Rabin

Top-Beteiligung

Camping potty is the best thing to get for 4+ kids

10 Wo.

Antworten

Keneilwe Peo Moamogwa

24. Januar

.
Hello everyone 🌸

I'm also on the potty training journey for my 3.5 years son, it's been 2 weeks in and we're getting somewhere. I'm also super grateful for the nursery school he goes to, the teachers there are so helpful in our potty training journey.

We're still battling with poo-poo 🤔 I really can't wait to get that part right. The pee-pee is better, every 30min I take him to the toilet and he does pee although in the mornings wh... Mehr anzeigen

Anonymes Mitglied

21. Januar

I thought we were in the clear. Same battle regression type behavior pretty much exactly a YEAR later. She's turning four in two weeks. It seems psychological. She was day time dry and no poop accidents for weeks. Then during Christmas break on vacation she started having poop accidents. Those disappeared but now we're back to the 2-5 times a day lightly peeing her pants and resisting prompting. Mainly when she wants attention but also when she's engrossed in play. She resists us telling her to go on a timer or if we notice she has to go. She resists routines like we always go before dinner etc. Like full on tantrum making us feel like we are not respecting her body boundaries and you can't force a kid to sit on the toilet. Rewards don't work with her. Recognition either. Talking about being a big girl. Nothing sticks.

We're exhausted and tbh I loathe all the parents who have an easy time.

It's been two years of at this. Laziness is not it. We've taken off pressure. I truly don't understand why this topic is so tough.

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

Regressions around Christmas often coincide with excess sugar and not enough sleep.

The poop accidents make me, as a potty training consultant, believe she was and probably still is constipated. A full colon puts pressure on the bladder, resulting in pee accidents. It can also cause behavioral challenges.

Up her water and good fats intake and see if she improves. Also, try to not leave the house unless you first use the restroom to model the behavior you want and have her go too.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

21. Januar

.

I feel like such a failure

My 3.8 year old poo twice in her pull up

After she poo In toilet 3 days in a row... Mehr anzeigen don't put her in pull-ups anymore but she is learning. Don't stress about it too much.

Anna Hooley

10 Wo.

Antworten

Katey Helms

23. Januar

.

I'm so over this potty training thing. He's gone from almost 100% trained to peeing himself and not caring at all that he's wet. Where am I going wrong?! He 100% takes himself 💩 but peeing is like pulling teeth to get him to go.

We went no diaper back in March 2025, just pull ups at bedtime.

3 years and 3 months.

I feel defeated and like a failure, his female friends same age are all potty trained and even wear underwear to bed with minimal night time accidents.

Anonymes Mitglied 149

I can definitely relate! My son is 4 and he has regressed so bad. He will only go pee if I remind him to go every 15 minutes otherwise he wets himself and doesn't care! And don't even get me started on 🍌 he will stand there and stare at me while going in his underwear/pull up even when I ask him to go sit

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

22. Januar

hello i'm new here, my son is potty trained 13 months. (he is just gone 4) he will gladly pee in the toilet pot. he will never ever ever poo in it. he poo's his pants up to 10 12 times a day he needs to be standing to clench and push out, and only small bits come out roughly the size of a strawberry consistency is normal. but he will pop his pants so much. sometimes he will say it's gone back up, anyone any suggestions what could be wrong, he was prescribed movicol by his gp. pls can anyone relate or have suggestions what i could do. thank you x

Nat Keentok

It sounds like he is constipated and withholding - look up encopresis.

They aren't always aware of the accidents believe it or not!

Does he drink adequate water and have sufficient fibre?

Sounds EXACTLY like my kid. Constipation with withholding/encopresis.

If that checks out for your son after some digging, I would start managing it asap.

There are great groups on here.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Amanda Berent Wiorek

23. Januar

.

Anyone cracked the code on how to get toddler to tell you they need to pee or 🦌? Mine absolutely refuses to say i need to go only let's bladder explode.

Dale Pennycuick

they're not ready? To recognise their own signs yet.its something that comes with maturity. My son will tell me, now that he recognises the need, but did not prior to understanding the need.

10 Wo.

Antworten
Bearbeitet

Anonymes Mitglied

23. Januar

.

My 3.5 year old daughter was showing interest in the potty last year, now she's not interested AT ALL - does not want to sit on it. We've bought everything under the sun, we've turned on this ms Rachel video..she's not interested. She attends pre-k and daycare and is a normal child. This is our only issue. I've been told to start letting her wet herself (in regular undies) . Any insight would be great..no rude comments please. - A first time toddler mom that has exhausted all options

Cindy Shull

So I would put her in big girl underwear and a dress at home n set a timer and when the timer goes off tell her it's time to go potty to potty that's what I did with my daughter but her timer was a potty watch

10 Wo.

Antworten
Bearbeitet

Anonymes Mitglied

22. Januar

hello i'm new here, my son is potty trained 13 months. (he is just gone 4) he will gladly pee in the toilet pot. he will never ever ever poo in it. he poo's his pants up to 10 12 times a day he needs to be standing to clench and push out, and only small bits come out roughly the size of a strawberry, consistency is normal. but he will pop his pants so much. sometimes he will say it's gone back up, anyone any suggestions what could be wrong, he was prescribed movicol by his gp. pls can anyone relate or have suggestions what i could do. thank you x

Emma Rabin

Top-Beteiligung

This sounds like overflow from withholding and constipation. It's not an easy fix, he will need laxatives prescribed and to be completely cleared out.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Whitney Dyer

22. Januar

.

What are some reasons they stop peeing on the potty? She sits on it forever only to then stand up and pee on the floor. Seems to have started when I ramped up consistency.

Christine Mercer

22. Januar

.

Wondering if anyone has had success using pull ups during potty training? I am not a fan of going bottomless and am planning on getting some training underpants. But in the meantime, would love to hear any success stories/tips for potty training with pull ups.

Anonymes Mitglied 448

Pull ups only when necessary and once they understand it's to avoid accidents and they should be using the toilet , my little girl is 4 in April, she's fully toilet trained, I put a pull up on her overnight but I take her to the toilet before bed and she's never soiled her nappy overnight , if she's awake with a pull up on she always tells me when she needs to use the toilet , she understands they're used like underwear and as a precaution, good luck xx

10 Wo.

Antworten

ThoughtfulTulip593

21. Januar

.

My daughter is 3.5. She will sit on the potty frequently but has never ever released pee into the potty. She knows what to do but won't actually go. Help?! Any tips!!

Debby Kemp

Same! And she is great about telling us after she has gone in her pull-up. She'll sit on the potty for a half hour without doing anything... then 5 minutes after she stands up and has a pull-up on it is completely full and she needs to be changed.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

19. Januar

My 3.5 year old daughter finally pee trained about a month ago. It honestly just clicked one day and wasn't too stressful, compared to when we tried it a year ago and it was always a fight.

I know that going #2 usually takes longer. She struggled with constipation and hard stools as a baby/young toddler and we have done a better job at keeping up with her fiber/probiotic to soften stools.

However, she is still afraid to poop in the potty. Since we've put her in underwear, she now seems afraid to even go in those as well. She had no problem pooping in her pull ups but those are gone. I worry because I don't want her holding it in... the stools are soft but she squeezes her butt so much that the little bit she does release just gets "stuck". She hides when she is pooping and that's when I prompt her the same way I do when I can tell she needs to pee. Her response is always "no".

Do I just wait until she tells me she's ready to poop on the potty or is there more I should be doing? I was so happy we finally got her pee trained but now the #2 situation is stressing me out

ThoughtfulTulip593

How do you get her pee trained? I can't get my 3.5 year old daughter to release on potty. She will sit on it but won't go...

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

21. Januar

I am completely stressed and overwhelmed about potty training. I am a first time mum, very little support: and we are finding potty/toilet training particularly challenging, mainly around confidence and anxiety rather than understanding.

My son (4 years old) is very aware of the toilet and potty, is happy to sit on both, understands what they are for, and can stay dry for long periods. He recognises the sensation of needing to go, but seems unable or too anxious to relax enough to let urine or bowel movements go unless he is wearing a pull-up. When he realises he is wearing a pull-up, he will then go.

We have tried a range of approaches including a relaxed, pressure-free reset, encouragement without prompting too frequently, praise with/without rewards, short periods without pull-ups, offering pants, and following his lead. While this has reduced distress and made him calmer, it hasn't yet led to consistent toileting.

He does not have any diagnosed additional needs, but he can be quite sensitive and anxious around transitions and pressure. We are keen to support him in a way that protects his emotional wellbeing and confidence.

We would appreciate guidance on supporting children who understand toileting but feel unable to let go, how to build confidence without increasing anxiety, and advice on when to pause versus gently continue. We are also interested in knowing what is developmentally typical at this age and when further support may be appropriate.

I know this isn't forever.. but I feel sad for my boy we've not managed to solve this for him yet 🙄

Anonymes Mitglied 767

As a momma of a 6 year old who seems to finally be getting the hang of it (we've been steadily at it for the last 3.5 years), my best advice is to be patient and keep going. Keep with positive reinforcement, continue building confidence, and most of all, don't give up. You will get there.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Brenda Ripley

21. Januar

.

<https://www.inclusivequalitycare.com/.../toileting...>

Anonymes Mitglied

16. Januar

.

Anyone have an older kid struggling with bedwetting ? Son is 9 and still wets most nights . Still using goodnites ugh .

Renae Small

I'm not experiencing this myself but I've heard it is very common. You could buy pee pads (the ones used for dog training) and place them under him when he sleeps if you want to try to go diaper less.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Kay WU

21. Januar

.

Hi, My daughter is 4 years and 2 months old. We started potty training about a month ago. After a few days she was using the potty by herself, but she refused to poo in the potty.

One day she accidentally pooped in the potty, and since then she's completely refused to use it. She'd rather wet herself. This has been going on for about three weeks now and I'm really stuck and not sure what to do.

Has anyone been through this or has any advice? I'd really appreciate it.

Lauren Tompkins Carrano

20. Januar

.

How do I get my 3 yr old to use the public restroom? She will sit, but won't go. I have a portable potty seat I bring with me everytime we go somewhere. She's doing good at home with underwear and pants.

Sarah Livermore

Top-Beteiligung

hand her a small comfort or fidget toy after she's seated + try to choose public toilets that are quieter in early training. Most little are overstimulated by many things in public restrooms

10 Wo.

Antworten

Usman Baba

19. Januar

I want my 3 year old son potty train.. but he don't want to use pott.. what do i do? Please guide me

OptimisticKoala4758

My daughter refused to potty train until 4.5 for pee and still struggling with poop at fixing to be 5! I tried everything from 18 months old! Eventually she got tired of being wet I put and kept her in underwear no matter how many accidents she had. I still have to remind her from time to time but she goes and stays dry through out the day. I just started putting underwear under her night time pullup though so we've had one successful night so far of actually going in the potty.

10 Wo.

Antworten

PeacefulKoala4740

20. Januar

I started potty training my 3 year old daughter 2 weeks ago. She has been peeing on the toilet since day 2 without accidents. She went poop the 2nd and 3rd day on the toilet but then not again. I know poop takes time... she seems to be holding it at times , other times will do it in underwear or ask for a diaper. She hates to talk about poop will ignore me when I try to normalize it. I really think she's just disgusted by it, she hates the feeling of a diaper now , she hates pooping in her underwear. Safe to say she's definitely confused. I don't feel like going back to diapers fully is the answer, bc she definitely gets it. I'm trying to follow her lead but she is really just so stubborn and when she is withholding there's no talking or convincing her. I'm trying to come up with something creative that appeals to her but she's been extremely stubborn and nothing seems to be working. I need to start going back to normal life schools drop off and pick ups etc with my older kids , errands etc. what does everyone do dealing with this situation on the go? I don't want to keep resorting to diapers/pull ups bc I feel like it become a bad habit. Any advice tips is much appreciated!

Sarah Livermore

Top-Beteiligung

Yes, the best (one page) guide i found anywhere on poop training is on the PottyFriend site. (There's a promo code that makes it free: MAKEITFUN) written by a Licensed Therapist. I'll try to link it here. Xx

10 Wo.

Antworten

Luiza Sobral

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

·20. Januar

My son finally had a poop in the toilet! He's 3y7m and we've been trying since he turned 3. What changed? He has a sprained ankle and can stand on his foot. He wanted to me to hold him up while he peed standing and I said "no way". SO he had a pee sitting. And then... he felt the poop coming and like 5 min later of sitting there, it happened!! BUT I'm still praying it will be a start. Today he already said: "I'll poop when my sister comes back from school". NOT a good sign. He's using his tricks to avoid sitting again.

Anonymes Mitglied

19. Januar

how do we protect couches and beds from pee pee.. it's been two weeks and my 4 year old isn't telling us before he pees

Anonymes Mitglied

16. Januar

First day of bare bottom. I got my period with a migraine. Our car got a flat so my husband had to leave me for the morning. My son (3) held his pee for a few hours because he didn't drink anything. Once he finally did, he had one decent pee. Since then, he has run around the house and had at least 10 accidents. I haven't even been able to see what his signs are, or continue to set an alarm to ask him if he has a pee feeling, or gotten him to help me clean it up. When I say running, I mean full speed run around the house without taking a break. I expected a lot of accidents, I just didn't expect to not be able to keep up and hardly have a second to think. Feeling like a failure already. I really don't want to have to stop and try again. I specifically took time off for this and we've had to continuously put this off since he turned 2. He was doing pretty well when we initially started around that time. Sorry for the long winded post. I know this is the worst day. I just feel like odds are always against me.

Jessica Mae

We are one our 2nd week of potty training over here and IT IS HARD my daughter is currently trying to hold her pee and begging me for a pull up when I thought things were going somewhat okay. Hang in there. Day 1 for us she had a total of 15 accidents now we are down to at least 4-5 but it's exhausting you are not alone

10 Wo.

Antworten

Jalen Allison

19. Januar

I have been trying to potty train my 3.5 year old stepson since last summer . Last summer we had him every other week but now that his brother is back in school we only get him every other weekend . During the summer he was doing really well with going pee on the toilet and would have a dry pull up all day because I made sure to always ask him and to take him to the potty even if he didn't use it . But then when it's time to go number 2 he only goes in his pull up . Now that we only get him on the weekends it's hard to continue potty train when his mother during the week is so lazy that she just doesn't want to get up to take him to the potty (she doesn't work and stays home with him) so he has had a FULL REGRESSION . He pees and poops in his pull-up and his logic is "mom says I can pee in my pull-up " but he is far more than ready to use the bathroom because he has already proven it . HELP !!!! I also have a 11 week old and I think my 3 year old thinks since we change his diapers that we have to change his and I try to encourage him to be a big boy and nothing helps !! I wish his mom and I could work as a team but sadly she has too much pride to work together .

Nicole Edmondson

Have u tried giving him gifts if he continues doing it at urs? Im currently toilet training my son, number 2 is hard part of it all holding it in, but pee straight into the potty, tbh I left him in undies that way he felt it a signal to the brain 3 days after he was like mum I need to pee, my son turns 3 in march. Perhaps invest in a few, have a potty in the living room also so its there...dont put him in pull ups because they dont help at all, it's like having a diaper on for them..it is hard when the other person doesnt coperate but u can only try and good on u, I know some mums out there would love to have the step mum jumping in helping with the toilet training but again u got some like what ur going thru, doesnt appreciate it.

11 Wo.

Antworten

Angela Elias

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

·19. Januar

My 3.8 year old girl poo in toilet 3 times straight, is that fully poo trained? She is fully pee trained.

OptimisticKoala4758

Sounds like she's getting there!

10 Wo.

Antworten

Amanda Berent Wiorek

19. Januar

I've got it. The solution. And it tackles 2 problems. We have prisoners potty train. They must successfully potty train for their sentences. Or live in solitary confinement with no access to sunlight or fresh air. Kids would get potty trained and if anything happened to said child prisoner gets life in solitary confinement with no human interaction or fresh air.

Now obviously this is joke but this is hell in a hand basket. I tip my hat to anyone going through this hell for months on end. I don't know how people have more then 1 child after going through this. I'm only on day 4 of underwear method and we haven't left house. Hopefully I added some levity to the group and got some help on my original post

Holly Cropper Schroedter

I understand it is a joke, we all feel the pain. Mine will be 4 in 3 months. I looked at him lifting gus shirt and hour ago. S... Mehr anzeigen

10 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

19. Januar

Please help. I am desperate.

4 year old son, regressed with potty training (had a few accidents previously, seemed to be trying to 'hold') etc - now seems to be 'intentionally' pooing his jocks, will not use the potty or toilet at all for poo.

Anna Hooley

Have him go bare bottom until he poops in the potty again. Have him help clean up accidents as well.

10 Wo.

Antworten

Angela Elias

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

16. Januar

Yay my 3 year 8 month old girl poo in toilet 😊

Danielle Lynn

That's awesome little one

11 Wo.

Antworten

Stephanie Beadle

17. Januar

Has anyone tried the 'Upairy' potty training pants and had success? 4 year old with suspected autism and speech delay. Will sit on the toilet and will stay on whilst I count to whatever number but I think due to being in nappies for quite a long time doesn't quite understand his body sensations. X

Shauna Scott

My son is 3 and a half, I bought some and he refuses to wear them. We've had no progress with potty training, he won't even sit on it

11 Wo.

Antworten

Nicole Bell

17. Januar

Night time potty help. my son is about to be 5 in February. I know they say its a hormones and cant potty train like daytime and will come natural. but right now I feel its not it doesn't look close too very wet diaper. doesn't matter if he drinks or not like last night i don't think he had much to drink at evening. we wake him at midnight for a pee also but then morning he still get a wet diaper. I ask him why he did not go to potty and he said he just peed now. and i feel the pull up are comfort for him to pee in diaper. not sure what to do now as now I think its behavior not that he cant hold he is fully potty train during the day for almost 2 years. not sure if I have to get rid of the pull-ups but don't feel like. i am ready to clean sheets every day will.com

will.com

Anonymes Mitglied 454

Someone told me once, put puppy pads, adult absorb pads so you can just throw away. If you want som more reusable try a shower curtain. I don't know if these will help but hey you won't have to do laundry as much?

11 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

18. Januar

Hi, long one sorry.

We used a bare bottom, then commando then undies method for my then 24 month old boy.

He is now 2 months off turning 4 years. He has regressions at home but is mostly fine for both pee and poop But daycare is a joke. Other people's houses can be bad too.... Mehr anzeigen

Anonymes Mitglied

11. Januar

.

Hello.

My daughter just turned 4 in December. She is a very anxious child, especially about new things.

We started potty training in mid-October, and she caught on for at least pee after a few days. From October through holiday break, she would do great at home. Tell us when she had to go, minimal accidents. Outside of the house was and still is a work in progress.

She had was a bit constipated over this past weekend (which has since resolved and she is now pooping as she normally does) and then returned to school this past Monday and is now having nonstop accidents. She will tell us "oh I have to go pee pee" as she is peeing her pants. Anytime you ask her if she has to go the answer is obviously no. She cries if you try to make her sit on the potty to try.

To add there has been quite a bit of turnover in terms of staff at her school since going back on Monday, along with a new staff member who I don't believe is a good fit for her. Is it the school changes? Should I be taking her to the pediatrician? She doesn't complain about any pain or anything.

Just a concerned Mom looking for advice who is feeling really lost on this whole potty training journey.

Amber Ross

If she is anything like my anxious child, its because of the turn over at school. The people she trusts and built a routine with are now gone and she is having to rewire her brain on who to talk to actually school

12 Wo.

Antworten

Amanda Berent Wiorek

17. Januar

.

Boy is 3.5 years old in a week and half. I started the 3 day method but I don't think or expect 3 days. Lol.

At home he is in underwear and I basically ask him do you have to pee or 🦌? When we go out or nap he's in pull-ups or Diapers. He has peed a few times but I honestly just caught him b4 bladder exploded. He is holding pee but will 🦌 in underwear. I will try to put him on potty every 10-15 mins this weekend & Monday then sit for 3 mins. And continuously ask him.

I have advent calendars with toys and giving him a dum-dum when he has successfully peed. I am a SAHM. He attends preschool MWF morning as of January 2026. We praise, explain the process are patient never show upset. This is hard man! Any advice?

Sam Ahner

17. Januar

.

When is the best time of year for potty training?

Umfrageoption hinzufügen ...

Boutaïna Yanouri

16. Januar

.

Hey All! Any tips for a 6 year old autistic kid? We've tried almost every technique but nothing 🤔

Amanda Stinson LaLonde

It took buying tickets  from the dollar store that my son likes to collect & buy things off of a rewards chart that had things he liked. Coins to put into a piggy bank & kinder eggs.

11 Wo.

Antworten

Eva O'Brien

16. Januar

.

I did a search but can't find anything. How do you clean their shoes if they had an accident at school? I tried the soda bicarbonate and vinegar, I tried napsan, I even put the shoes in the wash on 30, they still smell. I previously had to throw away start rite shoes because of this

Kristi Coffee-Mead

I had to switch to crocs for potty training

11 Wo.

Antworten

Mis Themmytope

17. Januar

.

Ayomide Olatunji Helping Hand Foundation

•Folgen

17. Januar

Ashleigh Craven-Griffiths

16. Januar

Milestone!

We have been full-time toilet training for last three months and today my nearly 4-year-old had a successful day with no accidents!

Emma Rabin

Top-Beteiligung

Hurrah!

Congratulations

11 Wo.

Antworten

OptimisticKoala4758

17. Januar

I need to brag on my little one she pooped in the potty twice tonight and hasn't gone at night in her sleep in the past few nights! We are making progress with the poop withholding! Hopefully she keeps it up! So for those of you struggling with poop withholding keep working on it and don't give up!!!

Lauren Tompkins Carrano

Yep mine just started going poop in the potty out of nowhere after withholding till she got her pull up on for sleep. Every morning she would wake up with poop in her pull up. But now she goes in the potty on her own unprompted

11 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

16. Januar

Any suggestions to help potty train for overnight an almost 5 year old that has no problem at all peeing in their pull up or bed?

Anonymes Mitglied

16. Januar

Body cues versus timer

so boy is in my mind mostly potty train on a timer . every so much between forty five minutes to two hours depending on what we're doing sometime I have to do long day drives to and from family so every two hours I make sure we stop. Always dry 98% of the time nap time are of course still a struggle, but that's understandably at this age,

For bedtime overnights do you pull-up

But during the day we are underwear only

But it is on mommy's time not kid time. When should I expect that switch, or am I expecting too much as a no three-year-old turn three in December

OptimisticKoala4758

It's great that he made that much progress. He could start picking up on body cues pretty quickly and going on his own or need reminders for a long time every child is different. With my almost 5 year old it's about 50/50. She does have undiagnosed developmental delays and a speech delay though

11 Wo.

Antworten

Jasmine Pinkk

16. Januar

child led potty training vs regular potty training. Has anyone done it?

Pros vs Cons?

Laura Whiteley

If I did that my 2 would never have been out of nappies!

11 Wo.

Antworten

Michelle Yu

16. Januar

For those of you dealing with poop withholding, have you tried having your kid poop in a pull-up, but while sitting on the toilet? Has this method worked for anyone or does giving your kid back their pull-up causes them to regress with their potty training? Some places I'm reading are suggesting this, but I'm kind of scared to try...I don't want her to regress since she would occasionally have some success in the potty with pooping, but it's rare.

Anonymes Mitglied

14. Januar

Having a hard time with our grandson who is 3. Seems to be taking forever

Heidi Canham

My 3 year old is not interested at all, I had him in undies he will wet and poop in it and walk around like it's nothing and obviously I do clean him right after. I've run out of ideas on how to potty train him

11 Wo.

Antworten

Tami Pruett

11. Januar

So my toddler turned 3 back in late September. She says she wants to potty, but she either plays or sits for 10 seconds. Never has she peed or pooped. I think it's a control issue, but I ran out of ideas to help her.

Maria Maduri Kuzmick

I have strong willed three year old with control issues I tried underwear she did not care she was wet ugh help

11 Wo.

Antworten

April-Rose Flynn

11. Januar

.

I have a 2 and a 4 year old, both boys. Been potty trained for about 2 years now. It feels like its never going to end. This past month been doing nothing below on the weekends with great success. There has been little to no accidents. For my 2 year old during the week the daycare keeps saying he is refusing to go on the potty for them. At home he knows to go. I am at a loss. For my 4 year old when he goes to school has one to two or no accidents each day but when he gets home if he doesn't get reminded to go he will have accidents with underwear and pants on. I am trying so hard to get them to be potty trained. Picture to not get lost.

Sammie Hawkins

Your 2 year old has been potty trained from birth? Also why would you expect your 2 year old to be at the same level as your 4 year old.

12 Wo.

Antworten
Bearbeitet

Anonymes Mitglied

15. Januar

.

We are officially starting potty training my 3 year old tomorrow. He complains that his butt sticks to the toilet. He is a peanut and he has the option of a little potty or the seat with steps that goes over the regular toilet. He prefers the little potty, but still complains. Anyone else? Advice? 🙋

AmbitiousSloth6208

5. Januar

Posture Help

My 4yo is doing a really good job joint to the potty by herself but for some reason her stream has started to shoot out versus down into the potty. This has led to lots of pants and undies soaked because it's happening nearly every time she uses the bathroom. Any tips or tricks to help her sit so she doesn't have any more accidents? I'm dreading daycare and school if she can't get a handle on how to sit/pee.

Anonymes Mitglied 273

Potty or toilet? We found ours on the big toilet this happened but only at home. We realised our seat was for some reason quite small and high. When we go out she can usually sink her bum down in the seat a bit and push legs together. So maybe worth looking at a different toilet seat... hope this helps

11 Wo.

Antworten

Bianca Small

12. Januar

Hi ladies, I need some advise please.

My boy just turned 3 Saturday.

He have nooo intention to sit on a potty and or toilet! He refuse completely and I don't want to push him till he starts cry ! I feel then I am going to make him scared.

He follow his dad to the toilet and see how he use the toilet but still no interest.

I used a reward card/ books in toilet/ candy EVERYTING I can think of he still have no interest.

Kindly help me with more advise please.

My girl was soooo easy she was trained before she turned 3. But my boy !!! Ooowww my !!! What a story ! 😞

Banita Singh

On a similar boat, my boy just wasn't sitting at all on a potty seat, we bought a kids potty seat, n made his favourite Dino toy sit on it n pretend potty play, he like it, slowly he tried himself sitting holding his dino, now atleast he sits for poo. NOT fully trained though.

12 Wo.

Antworten

boymamma2022

15. Januar

I need help my little 1 whom is 3 is scared to do a poo in the potty and will hold on to it ,before xmas he started to do poos in the potty but since being back at child care his been getting scared to do his poos, he dose his wee in the potty /toilet but no poos

Queally Mary

14. Januar

.

I'm having a hard time. Daughter is about to turn 4. She pretty much likes play acting and practicing the entire potty process but she refuses to actually eliminate and it's a bit of anxiety mixed with not wanting to be told what to do. Can someone tell me if their child like this eventually decided to use the potty and any tips you have? She doesn't seem to mind accidents and even likes to help clean.

Katie LC

My just 4 year old has been asking for wees for the past year but has started slipping back in to wetting herself. However poops are a whole different story. She would rather do it in her knicks or just sit in it . She hiss, crosses legs or has a meltdown rather than let you change her. We have also tried everything you can think of. Rewards, praise, seats, steps etc nothing is going in. She knows that she needs to use a toilet and not soil herself but continues to do it. If we are quick we can try to get her on the loo and she maybe rarely will finish on the loo. I've been to the dr they haven't been much help and gave lactolose. She can empty her bowls fine, just not on the toilet . I don't know what to do

11 Wo.

Antworten

Kelsey Kirst Kloewer

8. Januar

.

I have a 4 year old daughter. She is potty trained but has trouble wiping her front and back. I understand the back is hard but how do I get her to remember to wipe her front. It is frustrating because she knows how, she just doesn't do it.

Constance Alexander-Craig

My mom broke it into two parts, wipe front first then back. It helped me because it was easier to remember "front first! Back is last!", but I believe you still gotta help them wipe at 4, they don't really get the hang of it until about 6 or around there. (At least for me and my brother that's how it was)

12 Wo.

Antworten

Lauren Tompkins Carrano

14. Januar

Guys, I think we're finally turning a corner. Turned 3 in November have been potty training for one month. She was still having accidents, not going on her own only when prompted, not pooping on the potty. This past week she all of a sudden started going pee and poop on the potty by herself. Every day for a week so far. I've come to find out she prefers the small potty so we're using that for now just until I'm certain she's got it and she's comfortable.

OptimisticKoala4758

That's amazing! Great progress!

11 Wo.

Antworten

Michelle Yu

13. Januar

Any moms on here dealing with their 3 year old withholding poop? She are potty training her and she is doing great with pee, but keeps withholding her poop. She has been on daily MiraLax for 1.5 years now for chronic constipation, we're feeding her a high fiber diet and a lot of fluids. She have also used a glycerin suppository to clean her out since she backed herself up so much from poop withholding. She is also using a sticker chart and gets two M&Ms if she ever does poo. We have her blow bubbles, blow at pinwheels, we sing, etc, while she sits on the potty to try to poop. Any other methods that have worked for your toddler? I'm so tired and frustrated over this.

Erika Raines

Look up Cori Stern on IG! She is great. She is a behavioral specialist and specializes in poop withholding. I did her Poop without Panic course and plan to work with her one on one.

11 Wo.

Antworten

Caitlin Elle Fletcher

11. Januar

I honestly feel like giving up because I don't know what else to try at this point. Daughter is 3.5 and we started potty training back in October. She does wees fairly consistently on the potty but cannot get the hang of poos and I don't know how to help. We've talked about it tons, explained to the best of my ability, got special pants, bought loads of books, watched Ms. Rachel. We've got reward charts and tried giving sweets as rewards. We've praised the very few times she has done them on the potty and tried basically ignoring (as in not making a big deal of it) when she poos her pants-nothing is working. I honestly don't know if there is some kind of issue that I need to ask the doctors or what to do. She keeps saying she wants to do them on the potty but then just...doesn't.

Jessica Frances

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

This is the most common reason parents reach out to potty training consultants like me.

The good news is poop issues are fixable.

12 Wo.

Antworten

Kristi Marie Robinson

13. Januar

HELP! 🙄 We kept our 3 year old home the week of New Years and she was doing FANTASTIC! 4 whole days of no accidents! Then, when my husband and I went back to work and she had to go back to daycare (my parents M & T, then in home W-F) she completely regressed... to the point of not going in the potty a single time yesterday. She doesnt even seem to care. I told her she'd have to go back to diapers and she just laughed. 🙄 Any advice??

Anonymes Mitglied 244

Start over taking her every 20 minutes. She can be inconvenienced by going when she needs to, or by you taking her every 20 minutes. She'll figure it out. Give it no attention. Hand her clean clothes and send her to the bathroom to change.

Don't threaten going back to diapers, unless you're going to follow through.

And definitely don't call her a baby. JFC people, you're supposed to be the adults and your calling toddlers names?

11 Wo.

Antworten

Maria Rose

14. Januar

Daughter was doing so good today and then by this evening after dinner, two accidents even though for one she was literally sitting on the potty right before she got off and peed everywhere. Any recommendations?

OptimisticKoala4758

Could the accidents be happening because she's tired and restless? Maybe she's not as relaxed try getting her to relax will help

11 Wo.

Antworten

Allie Richmond

11. Januar

My daughter will be 4 in July. Her little brother will be here in May. I NEED her potty trained!!!! She likes to sit on the potty but has never gone, not even once. She has tooted in there lol but that's it. She tells us when she's actively pooping her diaper or pull up and we ask if she would like to do that in the potty and she says no. She will sometimes ask us to change her diaper because she is wet. We have literally tried everything possible. Don't know what to do anymore

Anonymes Mitglied 973

Does she have any developmental delays ? Sensory issues ?

12 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

13. Januar

Hello everyone, I'm looking for some advice. My son is on day 6 of potty training. The first three days went great — he was using the potty for pee and poop. But for the last three days, he's been holding his pee and refusing to go on the potty. If I turn my back, he'll pee on the floor or sofa instead.

Has anyone experienced this? Should I take a break and try again later, or keep going? Any advice would be appreciated. Thank you!

OptimisticKoala4758

I would keep going and give it time. Just keep reminding him every 30 minutes or so to go. I had to put mine in underwear so she could feel it.

11 Wo.

Antworten

Sarah Mason

13. Januar

Any other mums using cloth nappies for their older child who isnt yet toilet trained, i sometimes feel like im the only mum still using them beyond 3yrs.

Shelly Pearce

We used them until they stopped fitting at just over 4 years old. Toilet trained at 4.5yo.

11 Wo.

Antworten

Evelyne Louis

• Folgen

13. Januar

.

Evelyne Louis

9. Januar

.

Dominating ASD Outdoor Physical PLAY Sessions for ages 3-6!... Mehr anzeigen

CG Autumn

12. Januar

.

My son is in the beginning of potty training and doing great at using the toilet at home but will have an absolute meltdown if I try to get him to go in public. I bought a toilet topper to help (we are starting with sitting down and will transition to standing up to pee) any advice?

Anna Hooley

Keep a potty in the car for him to use until he's comfortable in public restrooms. Start with family bathrooms, they should be less scary for him.

12 Wo.

Antworten

TaupeJaguar5429

12. Januar

I'm attempting potty training for the 2nd time for my 3.5 year old daughter she know potty goes in the potty she can't tell me when she has to go so I was told she not ready and to wait I waited now and she still can't tell me she has to potty she in a dress and real underwear now for naps n bed time should I put a pair of training underwear on under a diaper so she feels wet wet when she gets up or no idk I ask her she gotta go potty she says no I say ok u gotta let me know when u gotta go she says no I said why she don't give me an answer I want her to go to school and be potty trained for school this my 1st kid and I'm a single mom whom works graveyard shift so I'm trying but not sure if I'm doing something wrong or she just actually not ready plz help tips suggestions etc

She don't like no pants on as it is why we not doing naked

Kashmir Sky

On Christmas day we bit the bullet and "threw away" all pull ups and diapers. We have the training underwear with extra material to sort of contain the mess and put doggy pee pads under her sheet and anywhere she tends to sit for a while. She could go on the potty and tell me when she had to go, some days she'd be good about it others she just wouldn't. She'd either tell me she didn't have to go and then go 2 seconds later or take her training undies off to put a pull up on and then go. By removing that option she had no choice but to get with the program. We are on day 5 of no accidents through the night and for the most part we are accident free except for the occasional partial miss where she starts to pee in her pants but stops herself and finishes on the potty. It's been a lot of laundry and messes but it feels like we are almost to end of the tunnel. You got this!

11 Wo.

Antworten
Bearbeitet

Kerstin Meier

12. Januar

Hello,

our son is 4 years old and has been using the potty for about 1 1/2 years, but only when he is not wearing anything on his bottom.

As soon as he wears a diaper or underpants, he goes in his pants/diaper. As soon as I put underpants on him and tell him that we can try without a diaper, he starts crying. I've tried everything (?) (rewards, demonstrating with a teddy bear/doll, etc.), but nothing has helped.

All he has to do is pull down his pants, but unfortunately, he's not learning how to do that. My husband and I have been showing him how to do it several times a day for two years.

Do you have any tips? His preschool is slowly putting pressure on us...

Emma Rabin

Top-Beteiligung

Put him in loose boxershorts, they feel less like diapers. Reward him using the potty even if he forgets to pull them down at first.

11 Wo.

Antworten

PrettyZebra7723

12. Januar

Anyone have tips to travel while potty training please? My 4 year old has actually started to use her potty regularly but I'm worried we won't be able to use it on the flight which might confuse her, she's autistic... the flight is 3 hours long- please help

OptimisticKoala4758

For long car rides or something like that I put mine in a pull up and explain "only use it if you have to. Try to hold it until we can get to a potty."

11 Wo.

Antworten

Kiley Ewton

12. Januar

LONG POST

sry in advance

my son is 3 1/2 almost and we've been potty training hard since August, he still pees over night in a pull up and it doesn't bother him. If he's naked during the day and usually during nap time he just runs over and sits on his little potty and does what he needs to do. If he's in underwear he'll pee some stop then tell us. What am I doing wrong? This has been almost a yr of this and I'm getting tired of it. We can't leave and do anything as a family bc we can't take a chance of him peeing while we're out doing something. We live with my in-laws and she's constantly on my butt about it.. he's extremely smart so this shouldn't be a problem for him. He knows if he pees he gets one reward and if he pops he gets two, I've tried a chart (that just messes him up bad), making a big deal about it, letting him flush, everything. I've read a potty training thing, I've tried the "3 day method" I tried naked, shorts then underwear. If you named it I tried it. It's been roughly a year of this just lightly taking him with a diaper on for a while since August has been naked/underwear. Last week he just sat there at the table and peed and never said a word. I have no idea what to do anymore. I don't have extra money to buy the "oh crap potty training" book. I've tried everything possible. There was a couple times where we got day time potty trained in underwear for a couple days then he'll just backlash and pee in his underwear and still peed at night in his diaper/pull up. I'm tired of this I just want/need him fully potty trained. He has a cup full of water with him in his room constantly and always in his sight/reach so I know that's not a problem. If he's naked it's no big deal for him but the second he has underwear on he will pee in them like a pull up and have no care in the world or he'll pee then tell us. We can't do anything bc if he's in pants/underwear he'll just pee and can't go to town or anything with a half naked toddler. I'm tired of this and please nobody say "put him in diapers, for a week then try again" I don't want that, I want him to be able to fully pee by himself with underwear on. He treats his underwear like a pull up and just pees in it. If he's in underwear he'll pee in them and then tell us or tells us within 2 seconds pee all over the rug and just stands there and does it, or he'll run over to his potty and pee in the potty with his underwear up and have no care in the world he just peed in his underwear.. He watches Mrs Rachel potty training at least once it twice a day if not more. I spent one whole morning just rewinding it and making him watch/listen to it. He knows all his ABC's, colors, shapes, 1-150, addition, subtraction, can count by 2's, 3's, 5's and some 6's. So with how smart he is this should be a piece of cake to him. My main thing I guess is, how can I get him to tell us he needs to pee before he pees in his underwear? what am I doing wrong? Is there anything I could do differently?

Emma Rabin

Top-Beteiligung

Potty training just happens when it happens, intelligence has very little to do with it.... Mehr anzeigen

11 Wo.

Antworten
Bearbeitet

Anonymes Mitglied

12. Januar

Hello! I have a 3 and a half years old boy that I can't seem to potty train for no. 2. We started the process at the beginning of the summer right when he turned 3. The process was smooth and had only few accidents in 7 months since we did this but with the no. 2 I can't make him go. I tried all types of seats, from potty to the wc itself, he never wants to go. Sometimes he says he's scared, other times that he can't and mostly he does not want to sit on any of these. He still does the job in his diapers and after many months of trying and seeing him go constipated because he does not want to go potty i gave in and I put him the diaper and let him be... i don't know if this made sense as I am not an english native speaker but I hope you can send me an advice. What should I do? I think that he won't shit in his diapers 'till he's 7 but it worries me. He goes to kindergarten from 9 to 17 and he never wants to go. He holds it until he gets home to request a diaper. I don't know what to do, did I do anything wrong? I tried with cartoons too, I feel like nothing works. Thank you in advance!!

OptimisticKoala4758

I'm in the same boat with my daughter except she turns 5 in 10 days! No advice other than keep pushing through and being consistent and he'll get there when he's ready. But one thing you can do if don't already if have him help clean it up and flush down the toilet.

12 Wo.

Antworten
Bearbeitet

Carol Segal

• Folgen

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

• 7. Januar

Toilet & Potty training doesn't usually feel hard for one clear reason.... Mehr anzeigen

Anonymes Mitglied 352

Getting my daughter to poop in the toilet. She holds it until shes asleep at night

12 Wo.

Antworten

Anonymes Mitglied

12. Januar

My daughter is 3 and is day trained but at night when we put a pull up on her she pees in it while still awake. She says she just likes to do it 🧒 she never wakes up dry so I'm not sure she is ready to go without a pull up, but at the same time I know she pees in it on purpose at times. Should we just get rid of the pull up and see if she will stay dry? How do I know if she's ready to get rid of the pull up if she is purposely pee... Mehr anzeigen

Anna Hooley

I would definitely try no pullup for a week or two and see how she does. If she doesn't stay dry at all or up to half the time... Mehr anzeigen

12 Wo.

Antworten

Ariela Koslowsky Freund

11. Januar

How do you get your child to potty train if the are scared to sit on the potty? My daughter will cry and kick the potty if I try to sit her down. She is 3. Any suggestions?

Amy Rosenboom

2 Std.

My daughter (31 months) will use the potty when prompted by her dad, but not me (SAHM). When I asked dad what he does differently, it seemed like we do similar things to encourage her to go.

Anyone else experience this?

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Yes it's not uncommon for them to do better for one parent than the other. She may view him as the more "stern" parent and you not so much. I could be totally wrong but are you telling her to go or asking?

2 Std.

Antworten

Teilen

Melanie Cody

2 Std.

Using “Oh Crap Method” for potty training.

Currently on day 8 of block 2 (commando.. bottoms on with no underwear). Daughter is 31 months old. Has only had 2 pee accidents since starting potty training. No successful poops (had smears the first couple of days when bare bottom and also commando but that no longer is occurring) however no poop accidents either the past 4 days...Prior to potty training, she usually woke up first thing in the morning with poop in her diaper so I feel like this is her normal cadence with poop. We are not potty training for naps or nights currently. She will go potty with prompts as she is not self initiating yet.

Should we stay in this block or move to underwear? No successful poops in the potty is stumping me as she is so good with pee in the potty.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

I would say to go ahead and move to undies. At this point she really needs to poop. Constipation can be a serious side affect of potty training. I bet she will poop in the undies. I believe there is a section of the book that addresses poop withholding.

2 Std.

Antworten

Teilen

Monica Johnson

2 Std.

Has anyone been able to potty train your 20m old without all of the full signs of readiness? My son has been holding/pulling more on his diapers whether its dry or not. He has woken up dry a few times after naps a couple of times but not often. He has shown interest in the potty and will sit on it, but doesn't always stay. He isn't able to pull his pants down by himself yet. He will bring me a diaper if I say diaper. He immediately said pee after showing/saying it to him the first time and has repeated it often now. Maybe it was a coincidence, but he said pee while in the bathtub, so I drained it but it took longer than usual. But by the time the water go lower he started peeing before I could sit him on the toilet.

I figured it wouldn't hurt to let him run around in thick underwear so he can get that feeling of discomfort and learn that he can avoid it by using the potty. But I'm conflicted on how I would get him to sit longer on the potty. I've seen others mention that giving them rewards doesn't help and makes them expect a treat everytime, but that's what helped potty train my daughter. I would put toys on a stool in front of her and give her crackers as a reward. I've also wondered how often I should sit him I. The potty after eating/drinking, etc.. and when to stop giving him liquids before bedtime

Robin Murphy

2 Std.

Good morning to all my potty trainers I need your poop prayers and good vibes lol I think my grandson has finally crossed the poop bridge! He has been PP potty train for a while but you know the old I'm afraid to poop on the potty story today he is three years and eight months old and for the past couple days he has had some issues with diarrhea. Well yesterday I popped him onto the potty and he pooped. And when he realized what he did, he was so excited and I asked him. Hey that wasn't scary at all was it and he said nope not at all so let's see. The look on his face and the excitement when he saw that he pooped in the potty was so funny. I asked him see that wasn't scary right and he said nope that wasn't scary. I am hoping that when he has a more regular bowel movement that he's not scared

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Diarrhea is not fun but hey! Sounds like it worked out to your advantage! 🍌

2 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

6 Std.

Hi, anonymous to protect my daughter (2.5 yo). I have been potty training since January, and since early March she has doing very well by going potty on her own with little prompting with commando. When I've tried putting undies there were several accidents in 1 day so we are at commando phase.

However the last couple of days my toddler has been teething (late teether getting 4-5 teeth coming in at once). She has been emotional and refusing potty or having huge meltdowns. We had to end up putting her in a pull up and only a couple successful potty after prompting. I've tried placing her on potty but when she refuses she gets up and ended up having an accident on the floor multiple times. Right now this is not working for us. I also don't want to force her and make things 10x worse by having negative emotions towards it. She still does poop well on potty. Pee is where we are having difficulties.

Wondering if anyone had a sick or teething toddler while potty training and how to handle this regression. I don't want to lose my progress, but seems the alternative is having many tantrums/meltdowns over potty and having many accidents in a day nonstop is not working for me. Also not sure if I need to just start over potty training when teething is done and just do pull ups with no pressure in meantime.

Thanks for any input!!

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

I've not had teething while training but have had illnesses. Honestly, I used pull-ups when sick and encouraged potty use but explained that's ok if they couldn't make it when sick and also would mention that the pull-ups were for just in case and the would be going away once starting to feel better.

6 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Jenn-Sophia Lynn Simerly

8 Std.

Okay I have to brag on my boy (and a little bit myself)...after a LOOOONNNNGGG struggle with many serious attempts and breaks in between, my son has been in underwear full time for nearly a month. We do still have occasional accidents (usually only a dribble and then he runs to the potty) but he wears underwear 24/7 no matter what we're doing. It did take a little longer for poop to click (its been about 2 weeks since he started pooping in the potty regularly) but we are finally freeeeeeee from diapers/pullups. He's 3.5 yrs old so I finally had a convo with him that he were done with diapers and everyone has to learn to use the potty. We did the barebottom method. He did cry and ask for a diaper a few times in the first few days and then was fine

Natalie O'Connell

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

That's absolutely amazing! Congratulations!

8 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Sara Jones

13 Std.

Looking for advice or tips so I thank you all in advance. My son has gotten SUPER good at going to the potty bare bottom. I know the next steps are gym shorts or something easy to take off. Anytime my son wears gym shorts or even underwear, he just goes as if he has a diaper on, and I've left him in his wet clothes for a little bit but it doesn't seem to bother him AT ALL.

Is there a way to break that cycle of him not caring? Should I ask if he needs to go every so often?

Harmeet Takhar Khaira

I had the same problem. She just wouldn't care about wet pants. Having her help clean up has been a huge help. I'm not sure if she was just more ready this time but I make her take her pants to the washing machine and throw it in (or laundry hamper if we are upstairs). She has to wipe herself and legs with wet wipe and the plan was to have her wipe the floor but thankfully she's been catching herself with a little dribble.

13 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Audrey Harris

13 Std.

Can anyone recommend me a sort of routine to starting a 2.5 year old boy into potty training again? Yes Again. This would be our second time trying. He knows how to use the potty for the most part he knows how to stand and sit. But getting him to go to the potty is crazy.

He has recently started to express that he's pooped. So we are trying to potty train again.

Should I keep his potty away from his toy area or close? In the living room? Or away.

And what do people recommend as far up keeping a potty upstairs (where the bathroom is)? One for the toilet with steps? Or another potty?

Whitney Langford

I really liked the Oh Crap book and used this method for my 23 month old. I did have a little potty near the living room/play area but then also had one with a ladder in the bathroom. We've now fully transitioned to just using the one with the ladder in the bathroom but it was nice to have the little one close by in the beginning.

12 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Alexis Malena

15 Std.

.

Hey everyone!

I posted a few days ago about starting potty training. We just finished up day 3 of the “no pants” method. We’ve made a lot of progress. We’re still having a few but FEWER accidents. He’s starting to grab himself and run to the potty before he actually starts peeing 🙌

My questions are- when should we transition into only pants? And what’s the best way to navigate outings. Tomorrow and Tuesday we have to go out for about 2-4 hours on both days due to appointments (that timeline also includes drive time) would it be beneficial to put him in diapers/pull-ups or should I attempt to take him out with pants only? Also, how did you navigate and prepare for outings without diapers? The stress and anxiety of going out knowing he’s not fully potty trained is a real struggle.

Thank you in advance 💙

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Sounds like great progress. Typically you stay bare until they are accident free and self initiating and then go to commando, (loose pants no undies) and then when they do well there add the undies in. As far as going in the car, if you know by now how long he can hold it and the drive is within that time I would say pee b4 you leave and then when you get to your destination but if you think it's longer than he can hold it I would actually do undies with a pull-up other then so that if they do go they are a little more aware of the wetness. It's definitely anxiety producing and using public restrooms can be kind of a whole different stage so that may not work out as easily either. Do not add anything to the car seat. Even a small puppy pad can make it unsafe so if you are worried about the seat do the pullup! 😊

15 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

15 Std.

how do y'all get your toddlers to tell you they have to potty? he'll pee on the potty but ONLY if you take him and absolutely will not poop on the potty. we've tried the pavlov effect where he gets a piece of candy everytime he uses the potty but still will not TELL us he has to potty, and again will not poop on the potty even if you sit him on it for a decent amount of time. our toddler is 3 and we're struggling here 😓

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

How long have you been training and what method are you using? As far as pee goes, usually you just have to stop asking and allow accidents to happen. They get dependent on the reminders rather than listening to their body. For poop, it almost always takes longer to learn than pee. Where is he pooping now? Having accidents or waiting for a sleep diaper or what?

15 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

15 Std.

18 months

Starting my toddler in a week and a half when he'll be 18 month! Any tips are appreciated! I just found out I'm expecting baby number two and do not want to wrestle a two year old after a c section.

Pic for tax

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

So cute! Have you done any type of introduction to the potty yet? It's an important step at this age IMO. If you haven't all ready, go ahead and purchase a toddler potty and/ or an attachment to the toilet. Let them get comfortable seeing it and maybe sitting on it with clothes on. Take them to the potty with you and talk about each step from the feeling you have in your tummy to washing your hands. Lots of songs and books about potty training. If they get screen time there are lots of great videos out there. Mrs. Rachel, Daniel Tiger, The Wiggles, Baby Shark, and Sesame Street are the most popular. Use stuffed animals or characters and mimic how use the potty. Getting them hyped up b4 you start can be really helpful! Then pick a method you want to use and stick to it. He will get there!

15 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

ThoughtfulJackfruit4460

16 Std.

Day 3 of potty training my 2.5-year-old: big progress—no accidents today and he's going on his own! We're doing bottomless and using M&M's as rewards.

When should I add shorts/underwear? And how do I prepare him for daycare next week without diapers or rewards?

Gabrielle Jones

We are a week in a did pants/shorts on a day 3. Probably will do underwear soon since he is doing very well. Just need to find some that fit my chunky 3 yo 😊

15 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Nikole Zavala

16 Std.

My 4yo lil girl is struggling with potty training any tips will be greatly appreciated since she will be starting school next school year

Anonymer Teilnehmer

16 Std.

My 2.5 year old girl is making me think she's finally ready for the potty. Her wet diaper makes her uncomfortable and she tells us when she's pooping or wants her butt changed. I just need all the tips on where to start, I have no idea. We have a small potty that sits on the ground and also a seat that sets on our regular toilet seat.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

I personally like the "oh crap, potty training" method. It's a book, on audible and also a podcast. It's a bare bottom method but if you don't want to do that you can apply the concepts to wearing undies etc...

16 Std.

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

16 Std.

Seven. Days

My daughter is "spirited" - never thought we would get peeing on the potty down before her 3rd birthday. She is stubborn, hot headed, and has my attitude (send help). Just kept at it with the undies and lots and lots and lots of prizes every time a potty pee happened. By day 5 she was telling her teachers she had to go. On day 3, she held her bladder from 7am to 4pm and then obviously had a huge accident. Im sure 🤩 will be a different story - that is a feat for another week

Jennifer Harris

My daughter had alot issues with holding her pee happened for first 2 weeks now she is gping freely.

She has supriised me on going fir poos havent had a poo accidenr and tellls me she needs poo

Still prompting wees.

4 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Rebekah Balough

23 Std.

My almost 2.5 year old boy has been solidly daytime pottytrained for a few months now. However, he is in pull-ups for bed and naps. He continues to pee in his pull-up at nap and at night, and is rarely dry, even for nap. He occasionally pees in his pull-up, even when he's awake in his bed, despite being in a toddler bed and having access to the bathroom. How can we support nighttime potty training to get him out of pull-ups? My husband is concerned that we're laying groundwork for him to continue bedwetting by keeping him in pull-ups.

ETA: For context, my oldest is now 4. She trained just before she turned 2, and went from wet diapers every nap and nighttime to completely potty trained, day and night, in 2 days. We haven't had to navigate day vs night training, so we're definitely feeling a bit lost and like something isn't going right. Additionally, my husband's sister wet the bed until she was 12/13, and he blames pull-ups and his mom not being hard enough on her. So, it feels like there is a lot of pressure to get our son dry for overnights asap, to avoid another decade of wetting. 😬

ETA again: Thank you all for the info! I'm considering trying Upairy pants to help support nighttime sleep while also teaching him to get out of bed to go potty when he is awake. Does anyone have experience with this tactic or other ideas? Any recommendations for cheaper brands comparable to upairy, or should I just spring for the real deal?

Melodie Jade Cochran

stop putting him in pull-ups. If you wanna potty train him then get those training pants from Walmart that have the thick pad in between the legs.. they trigger the mind to know that you're they're wet and they don't won't like it. Yeah you'll have to do a lot more laundry, but it is what it is..

Diapers and pull-ups don't trigger the brain to feel wet because it's absorbent. I heard UpAiry training pants are really good.

I just use the ones from Walmart tho and it worked the same

21 Std.

Antworten

Teilen

Arya Zukhrifah

· Folgen

Top-Beteiligung

· 17 Std.

.

How many diapers does your little one go through in a day, and how old are they? My 2-year-old still uses around 5 diapers daily because potty training hasn't fully clicked yet. 🙄

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Honestly the best thing you can do for them is stop using diapers/ pull-ups when you are ready to potty train. Kids know what those are for and there's no motivation to use the potty. You can do bare bottom, commando (loose pants no undies), training undies or regular undies. Save the diapers/ pull-ups for sleep!

17 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

18 Std.

.

day 3 potty training

0 success such as going to ge potty by himself or telling me accidents all day (peeing in his undies and poop sometimes) lower your expectations. There is no way after three days they are going to tell you, they need to go or go by themselves. Try to remember that from the day they were born to however old they are now, they have never had to tell anyone they were going. It takes time.

Danielle Bollen

18 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Jasmine Aquilina

19 Std.

.

My 16 month old toddler started hiding to take a poop.

Tried sitting her on the toilet when she was younger as she was constipated. Worked great for a while. But suddenly she was screaming and refused to sit... should I start again? Maybe do something different? This was ages ago since I tried

Kayla Johnson

19 Std.

.

my almost 2 year old is ready all but pee and poop to potty train what do i do? Will sit on the potty, wipe herself, & flush the toilet, just doesn't know to pee or poop just yet, any tips or tricks? She's taking off her diaper all the time when she just has that.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Removing the diaper isn't really a sign that they are ready to potty train. It's more a developmental milestone. Not saying she not ready just throwing it out there. One trick you can try for pee is to give her a cup of water with a straw to blow bubbles in. It can help relax the pelvis to release urine. As far as poop for the first couple times it's best to just watch them for signs they are about to go and try to get them on the potty to finish but poop almost always takes longer to get the hang of than pee!

19 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Kimberly Forster

20 Std.

Looking for encouragement or maybe to know I'm not the only one struggling!

FTM and we started the 3 day potty training method with my 2 year old son this weekend. For the past 6 months or so he's been showing increasing interest and signs of readiness. He goes to daycare and they help him sit on the potty there a few times every day and we have had a little potty out in his play area that we just talk about in passing. So he's had plenty of exposure to the potty before this weekend.

He's done really well with recognizing the potty feeling and he knows the connection of the steps that come next. The problem is that the potty feeling absolutely freaks him out. He gets so upset and ^{and} cries and says "no potty" before he even starts going pee. Then after a couple minutes of being so agitated, he has an accident and then he is completely calm and fine. Sometimes we have tried physically moving him to the potty and helped him get the pee in the potty but that only seems to make it worse and he screams all done the whole time. But after he's done he is so proud and says "I did it! I went peepee in the potty!!!" Then goes back to playing like usual.

What do we do?! Is this normal? Does he just need time and support to get used to the change in awareness and expectations? It's so hard to see him so upset but we only ever respond with patience and calm and understanding.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Is he newly 2yo? Sometimes kids can be physically ready but not quite there mentally. If he doesn't even like to sit and is having a fit he may need a little more time. Otherwise lots of reading and songs about the potty. If he gets screen time there's lot of great videos out there for him to watch on using the potty that may help!

20 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

20 Std.

Does anyone have tips for twins boys? They just turned 3 in November.

Kid A: will sit on the pot forever and willing withhold pee and poop but will say "mommy put diaper on" then he will go find a place to do his business. Also he will say "mommy change my diaper"

Kid B: will sit and do his business on the potty but won't self initiate going to the potty...will just pee on himself.

They are in a home daycare and she isn't helpful. I remain calm and remind them we pee and poop in the toilet.

Any tips or recommendations for me I'll gladly take. It's just me also.

Michele Medeiros Hurst

Top-Beteiligung

Same question as Margo, what do you mean by not helpful?

Kids: nope, gentle but firm. Tell him he's a big boy and there are no more diapers/pull ups for daytime. Remind him you know he can do this and all his pee/poop needs to be done in the potty. If you do rewards, reward going in the potty

Kid B: no more reminders. Again, firm but gentle. You're a big boy bite and you're very good at going pee/poop in the potty but you need to listen to your body and go when you have the pee/poop feeling and be wait for mom,dad, sitter etc to remind you.

Then reward him for staying dry without reminders.

I know some people don't believe in actual 'rewards' like stickers/stanis/treats but by reward you can do a silly dance(kids live to see us be silly) or create a special handshake or a silly song. I also consider those rewards. That being says, every kid has a currency and if you can find it, use it to your advantage! My philosophy is a bag of mini marshmallows given out a couple at a time is still easier and cheaper than diapers!!

19 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

20 Std.

.

Help!

We've been potty training my 3.5 year old since October. We've pretty much got pee down. Still working on him telling us every single time he needs to go, but he always goes when prompted. Poop is hit or miss. Sometimes we catch it sometimes we don't.

For the past week, he has pooped in his pull up every day. He wears underwear all day and is only in a pull up for nap and bed time. It's like he waits until he's in bed to poop.

Tips or tricks? I feel like I've tried everything.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

As far as the pee, you probably just have to stop prompting to get him to self initiate better. They get dependent on that rather than listening to their body. He may have more accidents but have him be involved in clean up. Not as a punishment but just “oops you had an accident let’s get that cleaned up.” You hand him some towels if it’s pee, if it’s poop he can help dump and flush it, explaining that’s where the poop belongs. Have him rinse his undies and get new clothes. For the poop it’s very normal for that to take longer. Do you think you could get him to ask for one to poop in during waking hours? If so I have suggestions for that.

20 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Vicky Michelle Diamond

20 Std.

My son is 28 months and is happy to sit on the potty and wee but isnt something I do religiously because of his age. He absolutely hating having his nappy changed so ive explained to him that if he goes on the potty he doesnt need to be changed anymore. Obv his very young so im in 2 minds how to go bout it. Im in rented accommodation so worried bout the urine causing a problem on wooden floors (smell etc) His non verbal but very good and telling me what he wants through gesture and his understanding is amazing. Any suggestions please? I was waiting for summer so he can go in the garden but he will refuse not to wear trousers n I think his gonna have difficulty in not wearing nappies too, his very sensory. Sorry for long post but any suggestions greatly appreciated!

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Can you at least switch to a pull up type nappy? That could help him with learning to pull up and down and have more independence with the potty. He's definitely not too young for training so if you wanted to do it more regularly you could.

20 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Laura Rodden

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

·1 Tag

Hurts when they pee due to irritation

So I'm just gonna put this out there for any moms with little girls. My little one got really irritated she kept telling me that her urine was hot when she would go potty and then she cried and cried and cried, and I worry that she might have a UTI. Of course the doctors office is closed at this point so we had to the emergency room because I'm not gonna be up at midnight doing this if she does have a UTI and it's even getting worse she hadn't peed all day. [REDACTED] we have been to the bathroom multiple times and I also knew she had to poop. Finally at the hospital we were able to get her to go. I think she just could not hold it anymore. Turns out her urine was clean and clear, but even though I had looked when the doctor looked, he found an abrasion right next to her urethra opening so it was burning her when she was going to the bathroom, he suggested if she wouldn't. [REDACTED] Go potty to put her in the bathtub and let her go or put her in a little bucket and let her go because it would dilute the urine and not burn. I however have a child who is terrified of baths. I have a bunch of these bottles laying around so I got one and filled it up with lukewarm water and I told her that it was magic water that was going to help it not hurt when she went pee so I sprayed it as she peed and it worked like a charm so if you have a little girls who get irritated down there and it burns when they pee. This is truly magic!

Kaianna Socha

If she is getting irritated/abrasions from wiping, you can also just use the bottle (or an actual peri bottle) to rinse her each time instead (or sometimes so its not always rubbing at least), and pat dry, just as you would after giving birth vaginally.

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

21 Std.

.

Restarting toilet training tomorrow

We did try a few months ago but he was holding in his wee for hours at a time because he was scared so we thought we'd try again this week.

Last time we did no nappies or pants this time we're thinking underwear may work so he can feel the wet.

Any advise or tips is highly appreciated

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Nothing helps them feel the accidents better than bare bottom IMO. It's also totally fine to use undies. The issue is sometimes it just feels like a diaper the way they hug the pelvis and that's why people like bare bottom but it's not a necessity. It's totally normal for them to hold it for really long periods for 2-3 days. After that you would want to be concerned. How old is he? Another thing you can try is giving him a cup of water with a straw to blow bubbles in. It's fun and it can help relax the pelvis to release urine.

21 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Trish Reilly

21 Std.

.

I'm attempting to count the days my 3 yo son stays dry. Would y'all count the times he did not pull his pants down far enough still considered dry? Or what if he gets to the pot, but pees before the toilet is ready?

Anonymer Teilnehmer 811

I personally wouldn't count. It doesn't change anything. If he's wet, he's wet. If he's dry, he's dry. Just take it day by day and before you know it, you won't even be able to remember the last time he wet himself

21 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Sabrina Lininger

21 Std.

best thing to get the pee out of carpet?

i don't have a carpet cleaner, thank you!

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

I just used my favorite fabric cleaner for carpets and couches. Dawn dish soap for clothes

21 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Autumn S. Hilton

21 Std.

Trying to start potty training my almost 3 year old boy (little behind other kids but finally talking and learning things) he knows the potty and I got him his own and he wants to sit on it and when I say potty time he will go and sit but he hasn't grasp the idea of actually going on it , tips?

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

One thing you can try is a cup of water with a straw to blow bubbles in. It's fun and it can also help relax the pelvis to release urine!

21 Std.

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

21 Std.

.

My daughter turned 3 in November and potty training her has been a nightmare. She goes in the potty but also in her pants. We have a timer set for every 30 mins for her to go sit on the potty. We have gone through our entire underwear supply for her in just 1 morning . Going bare butt is not an option. Need suggestions on more ideas to try.

Hopelyn Henry

22 Std.

.

Hey guys!! So My 2 year old daughter got a potty chair. The first day she had it she took her diaper off herself and used it without me saying anything. I've done a couple days bare bottom and some days with her diaper on loose so she's able to take it off herself. She knows when she has to poop and will go to the potty and will also sometimes use it when she has to pee. In the mornings as soon as she wakes up we go to the bathroom and always uses it. Today I got her undies that match her potty (Minnie Mouse in hopes of encouraging it more) and pull ups for night time. I have a 2 month old so I know it's not gonna be perfect at the moment. Is there any other things i should be doing? Like what about the car, out and about, when's the best times besides mornings?? Thank you for any help!!

Nevaeh Davis

Im not potty training yet so I dont have experienced advice but for car time id say that if youre driving far, take stops often and if youre just going to the store or someone else's house take time to go straight to the bathroom when you get there, you'll have to account for extra time before appointments and scheduled things

21 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

22 Std.

Hi moms! I just wanted to ask if anyone has experienced this during potty training 🙄

My 4-year-old is doing really well with peeing. She doesn't wear diapers anymore, even at night. But when it comes to pooping, she keeps holding it and only asks for a diaper when she needs to go.

The problem is, she sometimes doesn't poop for 4 days or more 🤔 I'm worried and honestly getting a bit stressed.

Has anyone gone through the same thing? What helped your child get comfortable pooping in the toilet?

Any advice would really mean a lot 💛

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Yes!! This is very common! Most kids struggle with poop over pee. If she knows how to ask for a diaper you can actually work with that. It's called fading. encourage them to ask for a diaper/pull-up for poop and once they get the hang of that, give them one but insist that they do it IN the bathroom. Once they get the hang of asking for the diaper/pull-up and going to the bathroom for it then I would give them the one but see if they will sit on the toilet with it on. Once they can do that, cut out the bottom of the diaper or pullup so it's going in the toilet and then remove it all together. When they go in the pull up have them help you dump it in the potty and say "bye bye" poop! Explaining that's where it belongs. A lot of theories say that kids feel like they are losing a part of themselves and saying goodbye helps. 🧒 Other than that and just time, lots of songs and books about poop. They have just about every themed book with whatever animal or character they like. There's tons of funny stuff on most music apps and YouTube. Mrs. Rachel, The Wiggles, Sesame Street, and Daniel Tiger all have great potty training video. If they have a Tonie Box they make a cute little poop emoji that's all talk about poop on the potty.

22 Std.

Antworten

Teilen

Windy

• Folgen

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

• 22 Std.

.

Should parents wait until the child is fully ready, or is it okay to gently train them earlier?

Natalie O'Connell

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

I feel like introducing them to it earlier does help when they become more ready to potty train so they are already comfortable with the idea.

22 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Tairn  Andarna

22 Std.

What's your favorite brand of pull ups?

Dorian Mullino

we love parents choice. they're thinner and more underwear like than our cloth training undies. plus a 94 count for $20 is a steal

21 Std.

Antworten

Teilen

United Stages Of Motherhood Network

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

· 23 Std.

.

United Stages Of Motherhood Network

· Folgen

1 Tag

.

Easter Sunday roll call 🐣👉

W... Mehr anzeigen

Anonymer Teilnehmer 954

We did matching outfits, an egg hunt, and a small family dinner at home yesterday. This morning we gave the kids their Easter baskets and we'll be eating dinner at Texas Roadhouse.

23 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Kay Newton

23 Std.

Hi. My name is Kayla mom to 1 son who is 2 almost 3 in October. He is advanced for his age and is ready to start using the potty like a big boy. I am looking for all tips and tricks to help him to be fully potty trained. Currently using pull ups. He is constantly drinking so I go through a lot of pull ups at least a 20 pack every two days. Thank you so much.

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

How long is he keeping dry? Is he aware of the need to pee?

23 Std.

Antworten
Teilen

Jennifer Marie

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

·1 Tag

Buyer beware: these are FRAGRANCED! 🤔 why is there fragrance on pull ups???

Mellisa Jacobs

Cause pee smells bad! Lol but that's why I buy pull ups.

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

stress

idk what to do i been potty training since friday decided to go right into undies since he will be going to school and he keeps peeing in them even when i get him to sit on potty he either doesn't do anything or if he does a little and then does more in his undies i've already changed him like 4 times today that can't be normal 🤔 but i know he understands it's wrong so idk anymore

Michele Medeiros Hurst

Top-Beteiligung

1. How old is he
2. What prompted you to start this weekend
3. How does his school handle potty training

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

.

potty training with no car

hello been potty training, my son goes back to school tomorrow (daycare) i don't drive we'd be taking ttc im so nervous about accidents on bus / subway any words of wisdom?

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

How long is the ride and has he been holding it that long at home?

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

.

potty training

been potty training for 3 days ... chose the right into underwear method ... child going back to daycare tomorrow (he is 3) he keeps having accidents in the underwear despite me telling him to let me know, should i just send him in underwear see if they are able to enforce it? or give up? (daycare has already said they help and will do whatever it is i'm doing at home they take our lead etc)

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

That's hard to say as I'm sure daycare will have a say in that. How many accidents is he having versus how many successes?

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

DelightfulPassionfruit8917

1 Tag

My 3 year old is newly potty trained (still setting times and what not). He keeps taking his pull up off at nap / bed time when he pees in it. What should we do?

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

That's good awareness that he's taking it off when he goes! But if he's not ready to go pull-up free during sleep, either teach him to help clean up and put a new one on or put something on over them that he struggles to take off

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

Hi! Sorry this is a long one! We've started potty training, she seems to have all the signs- she can sit on potty, interested in toilet/ flushing, goes to hide to poop, dry sometimes for an hour or so, and is quite a vocal 20 month old (almost 21 months)

As it's bank holiday here, I have 4 days off. The first day seemed to go really well. She peed 3 times and poo'd once in the potty! But then the second day was awful, I didn't show any frustration but I'd sit her on the pot... Mehr anzeigen

Michele Medeiros Hurst

Top-Beteiligung

While she is showing signs, she may not be recognizing the feelings yet. She may not be completely ready.

Taking her so often is going to burn you both out and isn't allowing her to get a full bladder to be able to recognize that feeling.

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

Starting on potty training my 2 year old son.. where do I start? He will sit on the potty and he always says his turn but doesn't actually go .

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Is he aware of the need to go?

Sit him at key points of the day- upon wakening, around meals, before bath and sleep. ... Mehr anzeigen

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Thallia Burgess

1 Tag

I'm going crazy over here! My LO is 2 on Tuesday- she's been showing readiness signs since 18 months and does the odd wee/poo on the potty or toilet. But if we try the no clothes method, she starts on the floor then can't release when we get her to the toilet/potty. She shouts oh no, tells me when she needs to go etc but isn't getting any release on the toilet, we've tried reading books, singing songs, asking her periodically to go to the potty/toilet but it's not clicking. Any advice?

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

You're doing great. Sometimes a little one is ready mentally before physically. This might be the case and that's ok.

Or how long is she sitting on the potty when she tries.

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Erica White

1 Tag

My daughter refused to go sit in her potty, is this normal? She tried going in back in Dec 2025

Are you kidding me? I tried encouraging her

wtf

She might be regressing, but not sure what

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

How old is she? Has she had any successes at going on the potty?

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

Advice for prompting

I am training my 2 year old we have had decent success. However I feel like he is so Inconsistent. In the beginning he would go forever between pees like almost always 3 hrs to 2.5 hrs then like a week and a half in he changed was having an accident within 30 min. Now it seems he flip flops between the two and he sits a lot of the times to try and doesn't go... I'm trying to trust him when he doesn't go or says no but because his pattern is all over the place it's hard to decide what to do. How often should I prompt him. Currently I do every hour but if he doesn't go on the hour then I switch to every 30 min because so much time has passed with no pee but it makes me feel like am prompting him too much and I don't want to overwhelm him any ideas?

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

I think once an hour for 2-3min until he gets the hang of it and then extending that time is fine. Even if he doesn't go tho wait another hour. If he does have an accident just say "oops you had an accident, let's clean that up but next time try to make it to the potty." Talk to them a lot about how their body felt right b4 they went. That "full" feeling in their belly etc... Once he seems good with that, having few accidents go to 90min and then after that stop prompting and see if he will go just listening to his body!

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Sara Jean Whittam

1 Tag

My 2.5 year old has been potty training since July, we have had a lot of changes and big things happening with my mom going through cancer treatment so I know it's common for toddlers to regress with things like that but my girl does great remembering to go on the potty as long as she's naked or even in a pull up but when she has underwear or clothes on she forgets, any tips to get her over that?

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Hope your mom is doing well with her treatments! The recommended course is to go from bare, to commando (loose pants no undies), stay there til they get control and then add undies in. If you have stayed at that stage for a while and it's not helping just go to undies and work thru the accidents from there. More reminders at either stage and when she does have an accident just say "oops you had an accident, let's clean that up but next time try to make it to the potty." Talk to them a lot about how their body felt right b4 they went. That "full" feeling in their belly etc...

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Racoondarkcircles

1 Tag

Hi !! Long post sorry 🙄

Did anyone else waited until their kids were older to potty train 😞😞

Back story:

My 4 year old had a really bad speech delay until like a 2 months before his 4th bday in December he wouldn't say much so I figure I would wait until he can talk well! Now he has started talking way more no full sentences yet but enough that he can communicate..

I tried to potty train but didn't stay consistent the last 2 months with a toilet seat adapter idk what is it called well Today I noticed he copies everything I do i sneezed & he tried to sneeze too, so I got him a toilet that he can sit in front of me & we potty together it worked good he went 3 times in it with me, the first time I yelled good job buddy & he yelled I win you lose ... ok got it we are going the competitive way..

Here is my question I want to try the sticker chart method, if you have used this what are the ways you guys reward them? Is when they use it or when they have no accidents...

We do use pull ups as underwear did not work as he didn't care but for some reason with the pull up as soon as he pees he gets upset..

Anonymer Teilnehmer 938

I started my boy at 6m to get him used to the potty now he's 9m and goes after every morning, after every nap and when he looks like he needs to. My goal is to get rid of diapers and pull-ups fully by age 2 but to be using only the potty during the day before he turns one

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

.

I had a couple questions regarding potty training my newly 2 year old. We have been training for 2 weeks now and it's going pretty well. We still have 1-2 accidents a day, usually close to bedtime when she is getting tired. We have only had 2 poop accidents in the 2 weeks, she seems to be doing better recognising that feeling than the pee feeling. Our days with the least accidents have consisted of me taking her to the potty every 60 minutes. My question is at what point do I stop taking her after a set amount of time so she can recognise the feeling and initiate herself? She is pretty good doing it for poops but has only initiated a few times for pees. My plan was to try to lengthen that time every couple days and then hopefully be able to phase it out? And when would you stop using rewards? She currently gets a chocolate chip each time she goes.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

So I would probably stop using reminders now. You could do 90min each and then stop if you want to but usually kids just get dependent on the reminders instead of listening to their body. Either way when you stop giving reminders and she has an accident just say "oops you had an accident, let's clean that up but next time try to make it to the potty." Talk to them a lot about how their body felt right b4 they went. That "full" feeling in their belly etc... I personally don't use rewards for each time they go but I would just start to forget to give it to them and see if they ask. If they ask for it go ahead for a while until they should start to forget about it too!

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

potty training / meal times

been trying to potty train my 3.5 year old for the past 2 days (yes i know it takes long sometimes) but anyways he was in his high chair eating and peeing in his undies while eating : normal? tips ?

Maria Kester

1 Tag

Hi everyone! I'm new here ❤️

First time momma 🥰

My little one is 26m. Just a little shy past 2yrs. He's always been interested in the potty and we got him a potty pretty early I wanna say 16-18m? We didn't really "potty train" just kinda bought it so he wouldn't be scared of it. Just like hey this is a potty etc. we would put him on it after nap time and in the morning when he'd wake up. He would pee in it too! But then he got a bad cold over the winter and kinda regressed and got out of habit. Decided to give it a go again after many several failed attempts. I stayed home all day with him and left him commando yesterday. We had a couple accidents but all in all he peed in the potty 4 times!

Here's my cry for help lol:

I've noticed sometimes he will just kinda dribble out on the potty stop and start kinda thing. I feel like maybe he's not finishing fully despite him getting up and telling me all done 🤔😬. Then he will go and have an accident. Not always but here and there I noticed it.

I'm not sure if he's holding it or what I can do to help him stay on the potty. We've been reading books, blowing bubbles and doing stickers and toy cars. I also can't get him to tell me he needs to go. He will start peeing and yell POTTY. A bit of a late reaction... I just tell him it's ok and we run over to the potty together and sit. He's really showing signs but this is hard and idk am I rushing him? I don't mean to, I'm totally new at all this. I have him on a timer. He hears it and I ask him if he needs to go or wait. He will either sit or tell me no potty wait. And we restart the timer. Today he peed in the potty maybe 3 times. 2 at my mom's house.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Really sounds like you and he both are doing a great job! When exactly did you start again? Also when blowing bubbles is it soap bubbles? Just because sometimes a cup with water in it and a straw can have them blow longer if that makes sense? Rather than little bubbles blows it lasts longer and works on the same muscles. Self initiation usually does come later in the process so I don't think you are rushing him. What is the timer set for?

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Taylor Miller

1 Tag

i'm wondering what y'all put on your toddlers for nap/bed time while in the body training stage. i'm nervous to do underwear but i'm willing to try anything to get this boy potty trained 😊

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Like Theresa said there's no such thing as nap time/ night time training. It's hormones, bladder size, maturity, and the central nervous system working together to allow the child to hold it that long/ being woken up. It's not even considered bed wetting until they are over 5 because it's normal to not hold it all night/ during sleep. Allowing them to wear a pull-up/ diaper for sleep until they are consistently waking up dry is just fine and won't interfere with daytime training!

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Harmmeet Takhar Khaira

1 Tag

I'm struggling. My 32 month old hasn't caught on to potty training. To top it off her day care will only allow two accidents before she has to put a diaper on. We stuck with it through Christmas break and got to the point where she would tell us she needed to potty and when she went back to school she regressed. It's spring break so we're back to no diapers. She is going to the potty every 17 minutes. Any longer and she has an accident. Will she eventually learn to tell us? Daycare is requiring her to be potty trained by August.

Edited to add: did show signs of interest. Can pull down her pants and pick them up. However she is extremely stubborn.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Are you sitting her every 17m or is she choosing that? I only ask because if you are sitting her she's probably going to get burnt out pretty quickly with that plus it doesn't allow them to learn to listen to their body's when their bladder is full because that's not enough time to accumulate any decent amount of urine.

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Alison Tandoc

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

·1 Tag

Tried today but in the afternoon. I told my husband because I needed a nap. He did nothing and my son is standing there soaked in pee

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

How old is your child and method are you using and have you explained to you husband what exactly he needs to do when you aren't around?

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

After 1 week an update:

Last Sunday mini potty successful all day no accidents after previously trying big potty with zero success.

He's had 1-2 accidents at school where they have small built in potty and a big potty which he's used both successfully.

However at home he refuses big potty. Friday we had one poop accident where he was playing with a new toy and peed/pooped and ran to clean it up immediately after. Last night my husband took him to the big potty which he's happily did and we said bye bye to small potty.

Today has been a mess - overnight pull up completely full but successful pee in potty. He's been so angry - he keeps now saying no potty when before he was self initiating and saying when he had to go unprompted. today zero self initiation. I regret taking away the small potty but now I'm wondering if I go back, will he regress or should I let him accept this change and adapt?

He pooped in his nap time pull up today and pooped in his underwear. One successful poop in potty.

I just feel overwhelmed. He was doing so well and now it feels like 10 steps back. His excitement about the potty is turning into anger and resentment.

He's 3yr 7m old.

Help please. What should I do?

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

So that's kind of up to you. What kind of attachment do you have for the big potty? If he's really freaked out by the big potty it doesn't hurt to go back to the little one until he is ready. It is somewhat normal to be new and fun at first and then start to feel like a chore. It sounds like you are doing this but having him help clean up his accidents is good. Not as a punishment but just "oops you had an accident let's get that cleaned up." You hand him some towels if it's pee, if it's poop he can help dump and flush it, explaining that's where the poop belongs. Have him rinse his undies and get new clothes.

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Dana Siliven Singer

1 Tag

How do I get my toddler to tell me before she goes to the potty? She tells me immediately after but we are going through so many pairs of underwear per day. I've been putting her on the potty every 20 minutes for up to 8 minutes. You would think I would catch her as much as she is on the potty but she barely goes in it. She is wearing underwear and I'm so sick of randomly stepping in wet spots in my house. We've only been at it a week and a half. Someone please tell me something will just click. 😞

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

How old is she and was she showing good interest/ readiness signs b4 you started?

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

With the naked method our son just held in all potty until bedtime with a pull-up. We decided to just do underwear. At first he was very against it, but is willing to put underwear on and typically goes pee when prompted. He has yet to go poop in the potty. He does have a pee accident here or there and gets very upset because he doesn't want to have an accident! My husband and I are both very calm and tell him it's okay and we will just try again.

Any advice to get him to poop? Is this typical when going this route? We've been at it for about a week.

AdventurousNarwhal5425

I started with poo training first when potty training and night training as I think it's better to start with the hardest and then the easiest

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

McDonald Cáit

1 Tag

We just finished day 3 of potty training for the second time. He's 3 and in underwear+shorts. Bare bum/commando not an option.

He's going about 1hr between pees on average. I'm only prompting for morning/before meals/before bed. Other than that I'm just casually reminding him what to do if he feels he needs to pee.

So far he's been telling me mid pee that he's going. Today he would do a tiny bit in his underwear and then stop himself. Then I tell him he's peeing and take him to the toilet. How long should I expect before he's noticing before he needs to go?

Ellen Murphy

U need to actually set a timer at regular intervals and say pee pee time get him to stop the activity he's doing and actually bring him into bathroom then ask him if he has to pee.

If he's in the middle or engrossed in activities he will more than likely try to hold in his pee or say no to your prompts.

U can try this idea or not. Also after eating and especially drinking keep observing for signs for needing to pee. Again interrupt take to bathroom then prompt.

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Ashley McKinley

1 Tag

.

Can I get a picture as to what is “loose pants”?

My girl has been going naked for three days, she immediately got the hang of it & we have had ZERO accidents while naked. She walks herself to the potty for pee or poop and goes. I don't even have to ask her. But the second she has any kind of bottoms on, she will pee in them and is content to stay wearing them wet. I have tried shorts or potty training underwear on for small amounts of time (like when she wants to play in the backyard) and she will pee before she puts them on, and STILL pees in them. The only time she hasn't peed is during her naps when I put them on her, when she wakes up I immediately take them off, but she does whine about taking them off. I've seen on other posts that it is recommended to go from naked to loose pants to underwear but what kind of loose pants are we talking?

Alyssa Jacqueline

I just put a timer on and every hour I ask her to try

Say push your pants down instead of pull and hopefully she gets the hang of it

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

.

Posting anon because I don't wanna get backlash or anyone to look at me differently... My kiddo's 3 and REFUSES to use the potty, we've tried EVERYTHING. From underwear to booty butt naked, we've tried the reward system with potty treats to stickers on a chart and getting a BIG prize from the store... Shows interest in the toilet for MAYBE a couple hours then REFUSES to even go to the bathroom until nighttime when a diaper gets put back on... Also showing signs of autism, we've got an appt to see the specialist within the next few months and I'm not sure if that may have something to do with it or what... But I'm at a loss and want my kiddo to use the potty.....

Emily Neuharth

Something that helped my toddler who had no interest in the potty was having her stuffed animals talk to her about and have the stuff animals say silly things like "do I put my head in the potty" then my toddler "noooooo" and then had my toddler show her stuffies how to go potty. Made it more like play and less pressure. It's still hard sometimes and she's almost 3. Glad you're seeking support and answers. Every kid has their own timeline

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Kalyn Franklin

1 Tag

hey mommas!!!

can i see ur potty setup!? i'm looking for ideas for my toddler girl, she will be 2 on the 24th!!

thanks in advance 🎀

Jordan Diana

1 Tag

My almost 3 yr old still wants diapers and doesn't wanna use the potty. He has successfully done once then reverted back to wanting a diaper vs big boy undies eight after his excitement of going (this was almost a yr ago). He is the only one in daycare that isn't potty trained and everytime u ask him if he wants to try he says no. He's totally capable. Will tell us when he poops and sometimes pees. He has to be potty trained for preschool in the fall

I havent been pushing hard as he is similar in personality to me and stubborn and does things on his terms lol. Any tips?

Laney Buie

Stop asking 🗨️ it's not a choice, tell him he has to go on the big boy potty.

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Ellen Daale

1 Tag

Looking for advice in teaching my son to push. He will be 3 in July. He's had chronic constipation most of his life, so he's been on stool softeners for about 1.5 yrs and ex lax every other day for almost a year. (1/2 chocolate square). We had to keep his stools soft due to enlarged colon, but now I fear he has no idea how to actually "push" his stool out. He is very on and off of whether or not he wants to sit on the potty. We keep his diaper on for it as to not scare him. Our GI doc has advised we put him on the potty after 2 meals a day since that's usually when he goes, to teach his body the position for pooping, but we are having zero luck. He still never fully evacuates bc he goes multiple times a day in small amounts. We've tried "blowing" items, like kazoo's and breathe work, but still no success. My life has revolved around his bowel movements for 2 years and I'm just sooooo exhausted of it mentally. Our GI new game plan is to lower the stool softener and start doing the ex lax daily, so he can learn the feeling of more formed bowels, but we tried that for a week and even less success. I'm at a loss. (We also do functional med and they agree with GI doc. We've done all the food intolerance and GI mapping so I know his diet is appropriate and not causing constipation)

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

So at this point just so I understand, his stool is very soft and you aren't sure if he is recognizing the urge? Like pushing poop out isn't usually something you teach it's kind of the same as when they have a diaper on, it's just an automatic urge your body gets. Is he in a diaper all the time or just for when he needs to poop?

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

SupportivePineapple559

1 Tag

In the throws of a regression after new baby arrived.

I was aware this was probably going to happen. But how are we fixing this?! Rewards aren't working like they use to, and he doesn't communicate he has to go at all anymore, or if he has had an accident

Do we take a break and try again once things settle down? Keep trying to keep with the little consistency we have left??

Appreciate any advice!

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Typically the best thing to do is just start over like you did in the very beginning. Taking a break would be fine if you want to but either way like you said this is common and almost always happens even with kids that are really well trained. How old is the baby now?

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Bethany Wood

1 Tag

Any success with a Potty Training Watch?

Dorian Mullino

we're actually trialing a potty watch this weekend! my son is 22 months and he will go to the potty and use it when prompted but after a while he gets annoyed with us.

its only day 1 but he's already putting together that watch going off equals going to the potty. and truthfully not having to constantly remember what time he last went and how long until he goes again has saved me today.

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

1 Tag

potty training 3.5 year old boy in undies

hello for easter long weekend i have begun potty training for my 3.5 year old since he's home from daycare for 4 days he understand that potty training means no more diapers and he has to go potty etc but he doesn't really tell me when he has to go we decided to do the straight to undies (please no comments about doing it commando etc) that's not the method we chose however he keeps peeing in his undoes and i just keep telling him not to and talking about it and to keep it dry etc i bring him to potty every half hour or 45 mins cuz i noticed an hour was too long to wait he will sit but get up fast or sit and pee just need advice opinions especially people who went straight into undies

Anonymer Teilnehmer 364

Oh my this is us as well and similar age. Literally the EXACT same as you. We also went straight to undies as he didn't seem overly comfortable having nothing on below the waist. He doesn't like it when he is wet and absolutely tells you. He also gets upset which we obviously explain is ok and "everyone has accidents" like it says in the story books. Yesterday was fantastic, only one accident and we even managed a 💩 (which I was absolutely dreading as I thought this would be a battle we would need to come back to). Today.... Only one success. He equally does not initiate despite us saying "do you need a wee?" And taking him every 30-45mins or his obvious cues. I feel like there are so many ways and advice to approach potty training and I feel soooooo lost. He's not exactly happy about it and seems tearful and afraid which is a worry but because he has had successes I don't want to give in. I feel guilty for pushing it but I'm also like you're absolutely more than capable!

Sorry I have nothing to advise but truly with you in solidarity!!! Hoping for a more successful day tomorrow. Sending positive vibes your way x

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Bearbeitet

Claire Hogarth

1 Tag

Heya just after some opinions please. My girl is 3 this month and has been potty trained for 3 months now, she was ready before I just couldn't face potty training and a newborn lol, she is also in pull ups at night but has actually been dry at night since about christmas. Do you think shes ready to ditch the pull ups or just wait a bit longer, to be clear im in no rush at all, all in her own time just curious as she's only 3.

Diane Cassi

• Folgen

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

• 2 Tage

Welcome everyone to our New Potty Training For Toddlers Group!

We're so happy to know your little tot is ready to take this journey. We hope that You find comfort within our group.. If you see anything inappropriate please be sure to tag an admin so we can take care of it right away. We look forward to getting to know all of you and to seeing all of your progress. Welcome to United Stages of Motherhood Network!

Diamoni Delgado,

Ashley Johnson Prueitt,

Ashley McKinley,

Mili Milton,

Briana Maldonado,

Natalie Jankowski,

Jordan McGaha,

Anna Harmon,

Michelle Wilson,

Giselda Eleni Gashi,

Cydney Vawter,

Brittney Bolman,

Jenna Carrington,

Rachel Johnson,

Danielle Skaggs,

Haylie Forward,

Hannah Elaine Council,

Sidra Tul Muntaha,

Lexi Kane,

Nabia Siraj Hashmi,

Anneke Rudolph Du Preez,

Gabriella Dauner,

Brianna Orta,

Janie Ray Stewart,
Jenna Goli,
Chrystal Portsmouth,
Kristina Ryakhuvskaya, Filisha Kapadia,
Natalia Paz,
Mia Shaw Sanchez,
Susan Prockup,
Louise Nadine,
Alyssa Johnson,
Amanda Crowl,
Rachel Buckle,
Nia Dekanoidze,
Shelby Pippin,
Ashley Mayberry, TaLeigh Houston,
Cassie Riboet,
Ashley Vowles,
Isla Elizabeth,
Teona Ramsier,
Maria Mitchell,
Isabella Dodd,
Jacki Marie,
Veronica Pittendrigh,
Diana Ford,
Bailey Proctor, Kellie White,
Kendii Montoya,

Amelia Glass,
Angela Tucker,
Gracie Salazar Martinez,
Sonja Ulness,
Sammie McDonnell, Heidi Price,
Jennifer Saziru,
Marie Carroll,
Hareem A Alqaq,
Cassy Roberts,
Brooke George,
Destyni Schmuckal,
Jocelyne Galvez, Breanna Tinnermeier,
Samantha Mattison,
Lacie Patterson,
Rachael Ball,
Mischa Fawbert, Annaliese Hill,
Haley Pierfelice,
Gemma Moore,
Kynley Buchanan,
Cinthya Ruiz,
Michelle-Dillon Daniel,
Trinity Howard,
Elizabeth Wolf,
Victoria Rose Jimenez,
Alex Martinez,

Becca Woodard,
Nogah Pescini,
Jess Lynch,
Ashlyn Shrontz Steinmann,
Amy Waldoch,
Martinka Matějková,
Meghan Timmins,
Justus Wilkes,
Valerie Myers,
Kaya Lee Tea,
Melanie Hinte,
Kristen Ecker,
Marilyn FI,
Megan Ann,
Alexa Harris,
Rebekah Deal,
Mackenzie Kral,
Courtney Shrivastava,
Madison Griffith,
Shelby Stevens Wallace,
Alivia Garland,
Brier Dodge Phounsy,
Sara Leanna Suárez,
Harmony Rodela,
Sasha Chloe,
Yuritza Espina,
Modesti Barrentine,
Toni Ellerington,

Danielle Blount,
Jennifer Marie,
Kristen Elizabeth,
Ronnie Soares, Audrah Jean,
Cyndi Guszak,
Danielle Brothers,
Jannet Cornejo,
Lyrik Adams,
Queso Wylie,
Anisha Lal,
Monique Clevenger,
Marie Young,
Emmi Kahler,
Emily Wheelock, Daisy Guzman,
Dina Tsirelson,
Ambur Christman,
Ally Fischer,
Kymberly Coral-Soria, Diksha Aggarwal,
Mallory White,
Tiffany Ember Shyuan,
Courtney Aitken, Jade Isabella,
Dina Karnis, Linsey Roy,
Joy De Vera,

Danie Roman Buck,
Josanya Ward,
Lexie Richard, Laura Brogan,
Jenna Paldo Foltz,
Ivy Rodriguez,
Deepika Neeraj Saggar, Zoe Woods,
Audrea Gallagher, MamaHlogi Gifty,
Chelsea Hoholek,
Kanto McPherson,
Rena Elizabeth Hallam,
Nelly Rosado,
Ashley Blackburn,
Charlene Woloshen, Saman Hamza,
Hayley Elizabeth,
Abigail Schaffer,
Lucy Kate,
Daniell Taylor Michelle Johns, Dzondria Tarver-Terry,
Nicky Bourne,
Kaylah Kovari,
Kheng Ming Tan,
Karina Salinas,
Katie Desmond, Shenaya Lee,

Heather Doe,
Amy McCallum,
Kirsti Porter,
Jess Salas,
Danyella Priscilla,
Saskia Emma Robinson-Brown,
Alijah Aliiah,
Norman MacQueen,
Crystal Hill Smith,
Nataly Lopez,
Tariro Mhute Mugweni,
Mariam Moussa,
Duygu Güzelderen Şişli, Milica Katarina Levesque,
Cristina Vlas Blajan, Aleena Gage,
Bri Mari,
Kacey Taylor,
Sharifa Samim,
Pat Musso,
Coral Camposeco Jernigan,
Elaine Sapnu Guzman, Simran Ahuja,
Renee Yantzi, Kaila Shea,
Amanda Neighbors,
Sumaiyyah Danish,
Riana Gibson,

Alia Davis,
Audrey Schnegg,
Lauren Temple Cala,
Paula McMurray,
Cassandra Thompson,
Leena Marie,
Megan Baldwin,
Alexis Roberts,
Samantha Lewis,
Morgan Dewane, Aliyana Shah,
Sophie Cameron,
Haley Pemberton,
Lisa Moir,
Mary Wilson,
Krys Tyna, Aradia Prince,
Zuzanna Ściśniak, Aiza Funnell,
Krista Lynn,
Кали Кали,
Stacey Bradley,
Holly Amber Dean,
Dianjit Sandhu,
Megan Stanley,
Samantha Silverman,
Melissa Steph, Phuong Thanh,

Brittniee Bankston,
Katie Hazelden,
McKenzie Groome,
Reba Lea,
Morgan Nicole,
Anhtuyet Phan, Rebecca Sha, Tenille Kidd,
Michelle SooHoo,
Maddie Erdman,
Brandi Marie Hull,
Alexxa ReAnn Snyder,
Catherine Valente,
Dani Myers Willinger, Macey Diack,
Maryam Sattar,
Zakia Hankour,
Laura Cat,
Victoria Guillette,
Kalinda Tiki Wallace,
Chyna Rey,
Els Borghart,
Lisa Stein,
Katy Oliver-Taylor,
Jessica Jones,
Laura Elliott,
Tori Myers,
Sarah Audrey Tsakila,

Kaelii Boyer,
Moriah B Harrison,
Kidakan Obrien,
Melissa Sheppard, Rouxie Buds,
Reagan Mckenna Rosa,
Shela Mae Macalinao Kaibara,
Lauren Mueller,
Mia Wisthoff,
Melissa Duguay,
Rachelle Ann Valencia Santos,
Angelica Bautista,
Tara Devin Shearman,
Jessica Griffith,
Jenny Nic,
Ari Trow,
Chanda Owens,
Josée Rochon,
Isabella Adelle, Jacqueline Lee,
Lucia Florence Afanasy, Kristina Ann,
Lillian Roy,
Ariana Pollack,
David Bolla,
Katherinne P Solsberry, Raylyn Dailey,
Carah Williford,

Emily Jean Dekker,

Renee Pelikan,

Chelsey Henriquez,

Jade Allister,

Kenzi Lawson,

Jamie Barker,

Andrea Emal,

Bana Favour,

Maha Tehotia,

Emily Blanchette,

Kayla Kreuz,

Nicole Van Der Merwe,

Vanessa Flowers,

Rumer Rowzee,

Jessica Lynn,

Ärchänä Kärki,

Rose Shreim,

Anna Silkett,

Jennifer Marie,

Candace Kerr,

Bex Dorrian,

Flo Burnett,

Joanna Morris,

Sogand Raissi,

Roxie Crowell

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Welcome to our community! Hope you can find some great info here!

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Shannon Hope Atwood

2 Tage

Hey guys. New to the group because I need some help with my three-year-old daughter. We started potty training her last year and she picked up peeing in the potty really quickly. She really seemed to prefer it. Not long after, we had her sister, who was a NICU baby. She regressed and would only pee in the potty maybe half of the time. She is still completely resistant to pooping in it. I don't know why. She seems scared to? She nearly... Mehr anzeigen

Shannon Hope Atwood

Verfasser/in

Baby sis is 9 months old, so it's been some time now. We have tried putting her in panties during the day (or the naked method... Mehr anzeigen

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

RubyOwl7667

2 Tage

My daughter is 3 and a half and we've been officially potty training since Monday. She's wearing underwear with a plastic cover over them. We're using a potty chart with stickers and small rewards for hitting milestones. She only gets to put a sticker on the chart when she pees in the potty.

She's done really good at peeing on the potty when I take her, but she won't tell me beforehand that she has to go. A lot of times when I take her, her underwear are already wet. Sometimes she'll tell me that she needs to go after she's already gone, but never before. She's telling me after she poops in her underwear.

I keep reminding her we want her to stay dry and she knows the difference, because sometimes when we go to the potty, she'll announce that she's still dry. But it doesn't phase her if she's wet.

I know everyone is going to suggest bare bottom, but no. My anxiety cannot handle constantly cleaning up pee puddles all over the floor and furniture. There has to be a way other than her going naked. How much longer is it going to take before she starts telling me she needs to go??

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Nah bare bottom isn't a necessity! So at this age and stage tho you do have to back off and just let her have control over when she sits. I know accidents suck but hopefully the plastic pants are helping some. They just get dependent on you taking them and don't learn to listen to their body's well. So no timers, no sitting her on the potty. When she has an accident you just say "oops you had an accident, let's clean that up but next time try to make it to the potty." Talk to them a lot about how their body felt right b4 they went. That "full" feeling in their belly etc... If you want to it's normal to have them help clean up. Hand them some towels to help clean the floor and then rinse their undies and get new clothes. I bet within 2-3 days she will be going on her own unprompted. How is she doing with poop?

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

DeterminedSquirrel8790

2 Tage

.

When do you consider your child to be potty trained? We go all week at daycare with no accidents. Goes #1 and #2 on the potty, self promoted.

Had one accident when we were somewhere new. Don't know there was a potty there. So note to self, all places, make sure to tell him there's a potty!

We have about 3-4 night time accidents a week. Gets up twice. Once to go potty, the second he's in such a deep sleep he has an accident.

Are we almost there?

Lyssa Prince

Sounds like you have potty trained!! Sleep accidents are not controllable, those are just hormonal. Accident free during the day and self prompting i would say thats it. Your there.

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

.

I just want to tell you all that after over 1 and half years of toilet training (with some breaks in between) our 3 yo is doing most of her wees and poos in the toilet. She on a 3 day winning streak of no accidents! I just want to give you all hope because I was about to give up. if you are struggling, don't give up! There is light at the end of the tunnel.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

That's excellent news! Thanks for sharing!

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

Hi! My son is 2 years and 6 months. I'm looking for practical ways to potty train. Anytime I mention going to the potty he would resist and say no 'diaper'. There's times where he'd sit for as long as 30 minutes but nothing comes out. I'm lost (sorry I'm a first time mom). Any pointers would be greatly appreciated.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Sometimes they need to be both emotionally ready and physically ready. Lots of books and silly songs about using the potty. Videos if they get screen time. Mrs. Rachel, The Wiggles, Sesame Street, and Daniel Tiger all have good ones. Taking them to the bathroom with you and talking thru each step from the feeling in your tummy to washing your hands. Using dolls or characters to mimic the potty process. All these things can help them relax and get really hyped up! When you are ready tho it's just time to start. I would do a countdown like "in 3 days we are going to start using the potty" and so on. On the last day you can go bare bottom or undies or whatever you choose but once you start you stick to it. 3-5min on the potty is more than enough. Don't let him sit for extended periods. One trick you can try is a cup of water with a straw to blow bubbles in. It can help relax the pelvis to release urine!

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

SoftCrocodile4465

2 Tage

ADVICE NEEDED!!

I started potty training our 3 year old, we've been going for about a month now and things have been going really well (with pees) - he'll tell us he needs to go and pees just fine into the toilet at home. The poops are another story. We have to catch him actively doing those and rush him to the toilet to finish.

When we are out, he is scared of public toilets because of loud flushes and hand dryers. So we bought him a little portable urinal to pee into, then he empties that into the public toilet and flushes it.

He can be fine standing up and pee into SOME public bathrooms, but then other times he's terrified.

Today we took him to a park and the toilets looked a little dark and cold (the silver ones). I didnt bring the little urinal so tried to hold him up to pee into the toilet. He was freaking out and crying, it was so horrible 😞

He did do it eventually but it was clear he did not want to.

My question is, how can I get him okay with standing up to pee in all public bathrooms?

Or do you think we should just carry on with the portable urinal for a while? Because I was trying to phase it out, but he will pee comfortably in that wherever we are.

I dont want to traumatise him by making him pee in a public restroom toilets if hes uncomfortable to do so and give him an aversion to it or something.

Also, any advice for the poop situation? He will tell us he needs to poop and his tummy hurts etc... he'll also do this whiny noise and ask for hugs a lot. This will go on for a few hours sometimes! (hes not constipated so thats not the problem), so we'll keep taking him to go, but he just won't do anything on the toilet. We'll take him multiple times and hour!! Then (im usually keeping a real close eye on him after the hours of whining and clinginess) he will go quiet and have a funny look on his face and I'll realise hes doing it in his big boy undies so we'll rush to the toilet to try and do the rest. Most of the time its already done so itll end up with me hosing him down in the shower because it'll be all over his legs after I pull the undies down.

More recently I read that putting him in a nappy and have him sit on the toilet with in on could work, then loosen it the next time etc... and try and gradually expose him to no nappy at all. So a few times when I've caught him going in the nappy we'll get to the toilet to finish, ill dump what he's done in the nappy into the toilet and give him praise when he sees it in there, then even more praise for finishing in the toilet. But he still won't tell us that he needs to do it, like he does with the pees.

One more thing I should mention is we've tried the whole "we'll stand outside and give you privacy thing", and he always wants us to be with him.

Any advice greatly appreciated!!

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Has he learned to sit and pee at all? Sometimes that's the better option for boys just because of the public toilet issues and the pooping. It makes it harder to understand that you stand for one and sit for the other. They make potty toppers for public toilets that can help with that but if he doesn't want to sit to pee then yes I would carry the urinal just to make it easier on both of you. Try sometimes too to take him to the bathroom when he doesn't have to go just so he can get used to the "scary" sounds when not having to go. Explain each one and show that it's ok. Some people also carry post it notes to cover any auto flush so it doesn't go b4 you are ready. As far as poop yes you can do that trick with the nappy. Also lots of songs and books about poop. They have just about every themed book with whatever animal or character they like. There's tons of funny stuff on most music apps and YouTube. Mrs. Rachel, The Wiggles, Sesame Street, and Daniel Tiger all have great potty training video. If they have a Tonie Box they make a cute little poop emoji that's all talk about poop on the potty. He will get there!

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

FunCaterpillar932

2 Tage

Went straight to pants this time after 2 failed attempts at the oh crap. Issue is my 2.75yo won't pee or poop on the potty. He'll happily sit on it but won't release. Won't really willingly have accidents either, just holds it til he gets a nap or night diaper or can't physically hold it anymore. Idk how to get past this. SOS

Christian Rivers

ive seen getting them to blow bubbles on the potty helps their pelvic relax and helps them go

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Leilani Ramirez

2 Tage

Hi! I'm new to this group. I recently joined because I am going to potty train my 2 year old son (only child) soon and I will be working with 3-4 year olds who aren't potty trained next school year and I need advice and guidance 😊.

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Welcome to the group! Do you have any questions to start with?

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Erin Cross

2 Tage

My son is fully Peepee potty trained but not #2. Any suggestions? We gotten him to sit on potty and try to poop but he wouldn't. He asks for pull up when he needs to poop

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

You've tried, when he asks for a pull up to sit him? When you did, what happened? Does he seem scared, nervous?

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

.

Potty training or big kids bed first?

My 2 yr old has been tempting fate in her crib so I think it's time for a floor bed.... But she's been showing a little interest in the potty so I think we should start that soon. Should I get her settled in her new bed before starting potty training? I'm worried both at once would be too much.

Anonymer Teilnehmer 762

Oh I planned to start potty training my 26 month old next week and he's still in a cot 😞

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

.

I'm potty training my 24 month old boy and we are currently on day 2.

Yesterday we had a successful wee and poo in the potty but only because I recognised he was having one.

I have tried no nappy or pants and he doesn't seem to care that he is weeing on the floor. I have then tried absorbent underpants and he again doesn't seem to care he is wet or tell me.

Please help he isn't recognising when he is weeing until I say and we haven't had 1 time where he has any suggestions welcome

Leyla Cypriot

What worked for me was putting my little one on the potty every 15 to 20mins (just for him to get used to the idea thats a potty toilet wee and poo in. And lots of praises like I mean over the top happiness.

And alot of patience, mistakes happens which is totally normal.

Also my health visitor advise me on try 1week for potty training, if they ain't ready you'll see the signs anyways but make it fun and less stressful for them. If they are not ready give it a break for 2to3 weeks and try again. Thats what worked best for me!

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Bearbeitet

CriticalThinker2020

2 Tage

Training pants or underwears or pull ups?

Which one do you recommend TY

Rachel Fitch

Underwear during the day pull ups at night. If poop accidents happen in underwear I use seventh generation detergent for laundry. I have thrown on gloves and thrown some detergent on the underwear on after trying to get most of the poop off the underwear just to give it a good pre soak and small wash before going in the washer. You'd never know there was an accident!!

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Emily Neuharth

2 Tage

My daughter turns 3 this month (April). We have been intentionally potty training since October (tried earlier but she wasn't ready). Shes good about sitting on the potty and peeing but only if we remind or prompt her. She has only ever told me once that she needed to go potty. Our biggest struggle is her pooping on the potty. She's only successfully gone poop on the potty twice and that is mostly because I've caught her mid poop and gotten her to the potty in time. She usually hides, crouches and tells us after. How do I get her to be more body aware that she needs to go poop (or pee) before actually going??

Things we've tried:

Treats

Rewards/toys if she goes on the potty (for poop)

Timers

Asking her

The whole "naked for a weekend" method

Books/videos on potty training

Having her see us go potty/us announcing that we have to go potty

Having her teach her toys how to go potty

She logically gets it and can tell us where she needs to go poop and says that she will tell us next time..... and then she has an accident. I'm at a loss.

She's a very free-spirited, expressive, goofy, independent kid who does things on her own timeline.

MotivatedOtter5291

Could you leave her bottomless but put a little potty where she goes to hide?

1 Tag

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

Looking for advice for our 21 mo old. We've been placing her on the toilet since she was around 14-15 months old - very casually (before naps/bedtime)...she really got the hang of it around 16-17 months so we started putting her on more frequently and she did SO well!

At the beginning of February (around 19mo old) she had a couple day stint of constipation, followed by several hard, large stools that now has destroyed her relationship ... Mehr anzeigen

Lisa Benepe

Read her favorite books or get new special potty books to make it enjoyable. Worked for us.

1 Tag

Antworten
Teilen

Kristine Paneda-Amoguis

• Folgen

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

·2 Tage

Hi, just want to celebrate a small win and ask a couple questions 😊

Set up of my son's potty corner. He chose the corner and where he would face.

We're on day 2 of bare bottoms (we are restarting training, first attempt was in January and didn't work out)

He started noticing he's gonna pee when he squats so I prompt him to go to his potty. All morning were accidents, but in the afternoon, he got 2 pees in the toilet!! 🥳🎉

Q1: Other than Clorox wipes, what do you use to clean up accidents? We have a play mat on top of our carpet.

Q2: is doing 9am-7pm bare bottoms good enough? Then I put him back in diapers at night. What's the best here?

Thank you!!

KayCee Hudman

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

First yay for the 2 pees 🥳🥳🥳

1. I used simple green during the day (its a heavy duty cleaner with low toxic levels) and then clorox at the end of the day

2. I think diaper for bed is perfectly fine. You don't train sleep times... there is a hormone that needs to develop. Their bladder strength will increase and peeing will become a voluntary action rather than an involuntary one. When my son started waking up dry more often we started pull ups with nighttime calling them night time underwear and would tell him to try to keep them dry. We would occasionally wake him to use the potty in the middle of the night and with time he started waking up and using the potty at night. It really does just kinda happen 🤗

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Michelle Ida Kint

2 Tage

We were finishing up bath time and as my son was standing and putting away toys he said he had to go pee and I told him go ahead. He started peeing standing up for the first time and didn't like it and told me he wants to sit on the potty 😂

KayCee Hudman

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

My son won't stand either 😂👤

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

Hi, I started potty training my 2-year-old three days ago. We went straight from diapers to regular panties so she can feel when she's wet. Before starting, I used to let her watch me use the toilet, and she would mimic me by sitting on her potty (with her diaper or pants on) just to play.

Now that we've officially started, she refuses to sit on the potty. I don't want to force her, so I've been asking if she needs to pee, but she usually says no—and then a minute later she pees in her pants. She does tell me after she's done, but not before.

What should I do from here if she keeps refusing to sit on the potty?

Arika Lynn

Could be the potty set up. My daughter prefers the seat on the big potty versus the plastic toilet. I use bribery 🍭 a potty song, a piece of "candy" (fruit snacks), or if your comfortable a real piece, a healthy popsicle, or a favorite snack/drink of theirs. I tell her if you go pee pee on the potty you get a treat. While it's not fool proof it usually works. It takes a lot of sticking to it to get them on every time though. 1-3 times a day she'll go sit on it. I have two potties (the seat and her own) and let her choose

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Elizabeth Black Long

• Folgen

2 Tage

How are we potty training our 3 year olds at night?

My boy has been potty trained for the last year but we can't seem to get night time potties down.

Kaia Jacquelyn Sennett

I didnt really start until both my kids were waking up dry in the morning. Both were 2 when we switched to training underwear.

I put an incontinence pad underneath them at night because if accidents did happen, easy cleanup. As long as yours isnt pooping in their sleep at night, I feel like you're doing the right thing and you just have to keep being patient and wait for those mornings when they start waking up dry.

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen
Bearbeitet

Alli Rodak

2 Tage

.

Potty training on vacation

Okay, friends. What are we doing on vacation for potty training? Specifically, when you're places like amusement parks where you have to wait in line both in the bathroom and long lines for rides. Other than just going before and after every ride and hoping, idk what to do. We had 3 accidents today, and I'm hoping for far less tomorrow. We're out of extra clothes 😞

Brittany McGovern

Bring a portable potty look on amazon they have foldable one comes w bags and u put a disper in bag to absorb n makes for easy clean up

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Ali Major

2 Tage

.

Underwear? How to transition

Ok so ive been potty training my boy for about a week now. Hes had 2 accidents woth underwear on and completely freaks out and crys and stands there till he finishes going.....he is doing fantastic as going on the potty with his watch and named. But he goes back to preschool after the break and obviously cant be naked....soooo how do I do this? Hes a heavy peeer. And I dont wanna confuse him by doing pull ups during the day. Cuz I wanna keep them as only for night time right now.... if thats possible I just dont wanna undo what progress we've made..... help for ideas (his underwear isn't padded and even then the ones we had dont hold up to him)

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

So the recommended steps are to go from bare bottom, to commando (loose pants no undies), and once they are mostly accident free there add the undies in. Has the school said it's ok to come back in undies after the break?

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Rozina Qasim

2 Tage

My almost 4 year old is not potty trained. I started a few months back but it didn't work out. Now I'm stressing out. Any trips how to go about it?

I don't have any support at home and days are busy with work and chores. Plus we are almost on the road and get back home late in the evening.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Does he travel with you for work or something or does he go to daycare? You don't need to be home all the time but if you can dedicate even a weekend to potty training, if there are no delays in development they should pick it up quickly at this age!

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

ThoughtfulJackfruit4460

2 Tage

Day 1 of potty training. He is 2,5 years and we do bottomless. It's definitely exhausting but i think we did good ?

For everyone who is confused of my tracking. I use an app called "Potty Whiz" and it is super easy and fast.

Afshan Fayaz

is it some sort of app ? or ur doing it manually ?

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Becca Bell

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

·2 Tage

Any recommendations on small bags to hold wipes and maybe a few pull ups or extra undies?

Kari Gibson

Just keep a small backpack in the car

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Katrin Wisenbaker

2 Tage

Just started potty training my 2 year old son. We've been doing okay except with pooping. How do I get him to poop on the potty and not in his underwear!?

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Just know lots of kids take longer to learn to poop than pee. Definitely not abnormal. First thing I would do is when he poops in his undies have him come to the bathroom with you when you dump it in the potty and say "bye bye" poop! Explaining that's where it belongs. A lot of theories say that kids feel like they are losing a part of themselves and saying goodbye helps. 🧑🏻 Other than that and just time, lots of songs and books about poop. They have just about every themed book with whatever animal or character they like. There's tons of funny stuff on most music apps and YouTube. Mrs. Rachel, The Wiggles, Sesame Street, and Daniel Tiger all have great potty training video. If they have a Tonie Box they make a cute little poop emoji that's all talk about poop on the potty

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

This is like my third time posting in this group but I am still just so lost and discouraged. This is my first/oldest child so it's all new to me. She'll be 4 in June. She pee-trained in January when she was 3.5. Poop has been a nightmare.

She has never once gone in the toilet. I've done the songs/books/have her be in the bathroom with me when I go. She will even clap for me when I go and say "great job mama!" So I know she knows what the expectation is. She is in underwear 100% of the time, no pull ups. When she has to poop, she goes and hides and goes in her undies. When I tell her we need to go to the potty, she screams. I've tried bribing her with new toys... she gets excited but still won't go.

I think I need to be more firm about getting to the toilet but I don't want to upset her even more and have her push back even more... I also don't want her holding in her poop and becoming constipated. Since bribing her hasn't worked, would you try taking things away? I feel so mean but I am desperate. This has caused my husband and I so much stress and frustration... I cry all the time because I feel like I went wrong somewhere. She is so incredibly smart but stubborn beyond belief. Any advice besides books, songs, rewards?

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

This is VERY common. My oldest did this for a year b4 he would poop in the potty. So hopefully none of this is a repeat since you have posted b4. First if you having tried it I would help make her clean up. So when she poops in her undies, take her to the bathroom with you and make her dump it in the potty and say "bye bye" poop! Explaining that's where it belongs. A lot of theories say that kids feel like they are losing a part of themselves and saying goodbye helps. 🧒 Make her rinse out her undies and get new clothes. All done calmly and gently of course. Your second option would be something called fading or shaping. This is when you encourage them to ask for a pull up when they need to poop... hear me out lol... once they get the hang of that, give them one but insist that they do it IN the bathroom. Once they get the hang of asking for the diaper/pull-up and going to the bathroom for it then I would give them one but see if they will sit on the toilet with it on. Once they can do that, cut out the bottom of the diaper or pullup so it's going in the toilet and then remove it all together. While she's using the pull up you would still have her be responsible for dumping and flushing and saying goodbye poop! Also Sarah Livermore may have some good advice for you!

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

LB is 2.5, tried training at christmas using the naked method but he was oblivious to the fact he was weeing. I did realise at this time however he seemed to prefer the toilet instead of the potty. We have begun again today using boxers and had 6 accidents and 3 successful wees on the toilet. My problem is he isnt telling me he needs the toilet as he is very speach delayed (currently at the level of a 1 year old). I thought i noticed him needing a wee today when he pulled his top up and looked at his boxers but when I sat him on the toilet he did nothing. He is quite happy to sit there. How long do we leave them sat there when they do nothing before taking them off again? And any tips for when the kid is speach delayed please tia

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

So self initiation or letting you know they have to go comes later in the process. Not typically right away and that's for kids with typical speech so give that a little more time. I would say by day 3-4 the accidents will be less and less and he will start to either just take himself or let you know. Is he good at managing his clothes?

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

Pee accidents

My 3 year old has been potty trained for about 4 months now. She is doing really well both at home and daycare.

I took her to an Easter egg hunt today, and I did make her pee before we left. She got quite involved with some indoor games set up there, and pees in her pants.

The situation got a little embarrassing with the staff there. Should I have kept her in diapers?

We have taken her out several times and she has always communicated pee and poop. For some longer trips where we didn't know if the toilet would be around, we had her in diaper, and she has peed in diapers when she couldn't hold in those times.

Is it better to keep her in diapers in social situations, or would that hamper her ability to be fully potty trained?

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

IMO no, it shouldn't be embarrassing. They are kids, they are learning a new skill. Carry extra clothing, take them to the bathroom a little more often than you would typically remind them. Of course she was having fun and being distracted. Anyone throwing an event for children should understand those things and so should other parents. Even a diaper for one long event can set off a regression so it's just not worth it. Just my 2 cents of course. No right or wrong! 😊

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Gianna Lucia Benavidez Capelli

2 Tage

We are on day 6 of potty training over here and I'd love some advice/encouragement!

My son is 2.5 and we are currently in Germany. He attends a German preschool that doesn't really assist with potty training the way daycares in the States do (more like a church preschool setup), and interestingly, they don't really prioritize potty training at all since it's not required for moving up to the next classroom—so most of the kids in his class aren't potty trained yet.

The good news: he is doing really well in a lot of ways! He will go pee on the potty and has also had multiple successful poops on the potty 🍑 He can hold his pee for up to 2.5 hours sometimes.

Also, if he's bottomless, he will go pee on his own without prompting. With clothes on, I do still need to prompt him to go to the bathroom.

The challenges:

- He's not great at taking his clothes off yet
- He usually doesn't tell us he needs to go before he starts peeing (unless we get lucky)

That said, he really hasn't had many true accidents. He's had about one since day 3, and that was when we were out at a friend's house and fully dressed—we just didn't make it to the bathroom in time. He did tell us he needed to go and was doing the "pee pee dance," so I feel like he's getting there. I've also been home with him and watching him like a hawk during this whole process.

We'll be home for 3 more days continuing to work on it, but he goes back to preschool on Tuesday. For the first week, I'm planning to send him for a shorter day (8:30–12:30). The teachers said they will put him on the toilet during their usual diapering times, but otherwise he would need to ask to go.

My hopeful plan is to have him poop at home before school each day (Tuesday–Friday) to take some pressure off while he's still learning.

So now I'm really unsure what to do next...

Do I send him in underwear and just accept that there may be accidents?

Do I wait another week to really solidify things at home?

Or try the "underwear + pull-up over it" method so he still feels the wetness?

I'm honestly nervous about sending him and then regressing 😅 When I was a preschool teacher, I used to recommend the underwear + pull-up combo—but now that I'm the mom in it, I'm second guessing everything.

Would love to hear what worked for you, especially if your child wasn't consistently initiating yet or if your school didn't provide a ton of potty training support!

Michele Medeiros Hurst

Top-Beteiligung

For the next few days Work on with clothes on and no prompting. Let him have the accidents and talk about how his body felt before it happened

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

.

Hello Mama's!

I am potty training my 36 month old toddler on Monday. We have a baptism not a far drive that Saturday. What do you all recommend for the drives? I've never potty trained before and i am not sure of the best tips when you venture out of leaving the house. She is a crib toddler so we plan to do pull ups during naps and bed. TIA for help and suggestions!

Patty Torland

Get a car potty! Even if you have just a car with a trunk. The pull up over the undies is great, but giving her the option to ... Mehr anzeigen

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Kaitlyn Hoffman

2 Tage

Okay Moms, I need advice. My oldest turns two in June. I've been putting her on the potty for a couple months now (mostly just when she wakes up) sometimes I get lucky and she pees and sometimes (usually) she doesn't. I've been lucky to catch her right before she pooped and got her on the potty. Recently, though she started trying to take off her diaper when she poops.

Is this a sign that she's ready to fully start? Potty training? Or do I need to wait longer?

She also just says poop just to say poop. So she's not fully communicative about when she needs to go pee or poop.

(this might be TMI, but she can look in the toilet after an adult goes poop points to it and says poop. Same with our dogs, she can point to it and knows exactly what it is.)

P.S. I'm also doing this at home by myself (SAHM) with an eight month old. Just to put into perspective what we're working with. 🙄

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Recognizing that she's uncomfortable in a poop diaper is definitely a good sign. Starting is totally up to you. Lots of people say wait til there are solid signs and lots of people just say do it when you are ready! Have you researched any methods you think might work for you? I prefer the "Oh Crap, Potty Training" method. It's a book, on audible and they also have a podcast.

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Bearbeitet

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

Hi! So week 2 of potty training. Hanging in there week 1 was great week 2 not so much however last night he held his bladder all night and went in the morning A LOT! I'm thinking this is a good sign? He did really good today too and requested twice no accidents so far maybe we are getting somewhere 🍌 🙏 🙏

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

That sounds like excellent progress!! Sometimes it does get a little harder b4 they get there because at first it's new and fun but then they start to look at it like a chore. Just keep pushing thru and he will get there!

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

FascinatingPomegranate5145

2 Tage

Day7 of potty training - how are we doing?

Hello! We are finishing today our first week of potty training, and I can't define if we are doing well or not, would appreciate opinions and suggestions.

My little girl is 2,5yo. We are doing the bare bottom method at home and we stayed exclusively home the first day and a half. After that she decided she had enough of being home and went to dress herself to go to the park LOL. We tried getting her out of the house with pants without underwear but she complained she was uncomfortable,!! so we gave in and put undies on her. Since the day 2-5 we had short outings to the park just around the corner, day 6 we had a morning long outing to the city center and today a morning long outing to the beach.

We bought a visual timer but she flat out refuse to go potty if we or the time prompt her too. I think she is doing fairly well self initiating though. Anytime we ask her if she has to pee she says no and refuse to sit on the potty every time we suggest to.

Day 1 - she had 4 pees + she peed in the pull-up at naptime - no accidents

Day 2 - 2  and 5 pees - dry naptime pull-up - 1 pee accident at dinner time (we didn't noticed she wore the undies again after we took them off)

Day 3 - 1  and 7 pees - dry naptime pull-up - 1 pee accident while we were at the park

Day 4 - 6 pees - full naptime pull-up- 1 pee accident at the park + 1 very intentional pee on the floor (she is challenging sometimes, she has a brand new baby brother and is testing boundaries) - not sure if we can consider this an accident too

Day 5 - 2 pees and a super full naptime diaper we had the impression she was really holding it the whole day - 1  accident while playing in the house

Day 6 - 4 pees and a dry naptime pull-up + 1 pee accident at the park

Day 7 - 4 pees (one of them at a restaurant- first time she asked to go potty while outside and actually went- until now she was asking every now and then but the kind of froze in public restrooms/or her portable potty) - 2  and 1 pee accident while at the park.

All the accident were basically right after we prompted her to pee and she refused. Some of those time she even sat on the potty like 5 minutes prior to the accident.

We are giving her 1 sticker per pee and 2 per  plus we have a little special song and dance when she goes. We have books we are reading too.

So, how are we doing? Is there anything we should change? Is 1 accident per day on day 7 too much? We still have 3 full days of spring break before she goes back to nursery and I really want to give her the best chance for success.

When she has accidents (all of them so far have been outside while dressed) - should I change as soon as I notice, or should I wait a bit to see if she says something and let her be a little uncomfortable! So far I have changed her right away, but I am not sure if that's the right approach.

When she is back at nursery they will help her. She already uses the potty there 2-3 times per day before we even start training. She is the smallest of her class and is following her friends there.

Thanks for any suggestion you might give me and sorry for the exceptionally long post 🙏

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Sounds like she's doing really well! She's probably having accidents because she's distracted and playing and just doesn't want to stop to go. Sometimes if you really know she needs to go it's better to just say "if you want to play it's time to potty." As you take her hand and guide her to the bathroom. Don't give her a choice. Definitely don't leave her in wet clothes. I understand your thought process but it increases risks for yeast and UTI's. She will get there!

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

RedChestnut2724

2 Tage

HELP!!!! so I am currently potty training my almost 3-year-old (he literally will be 3 in one month.) and we were doing the bare bottom method initially he was doing great! An accident here or there, but regardless he was doing great. He even had a few days where he would announce he needed to go to the toilet and then he will go. I thought he was ready for the next step. But I don't know what the hell happened, but he had a regression. Now he's having accidents again and literally just a few minutes ago, he was laying on the floor and he was just peeing on himself. He didn't even say toilet or anything. I had to look over and I saw him actively peeing on his leg.

Please mamas I need help! I don't know what I am doing wrong. My son was doing so well and now with this regression that came out of nowhere, I don't know what to do.

Randi Allison Saunders

Mabey he's not ready I waited till my son turned three and was waking up with a dry diaper at that point we made habit going straight to potty after he woke up and no pull ups that seemed to set him back I went straight to undies he had no accidents at night just by missing the toilet.

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Melissa Totes

3 Tage

.

Edit.

Thank you for the answers! We are a two mom household and I have never potty trained a child before.

My question has been answered, but I will leave the commenting on just in case other people have other advice.

Boxers or briefs for a 2.5 year old?

I have never potty trained a boy before, so I don't know if one is better than the other? Or is it just preference and what's comfortable?

Angie Richardson

We did boxerbrefs cuz that way they still held a poo if there was an accident but they don't feel like a diaper

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

2 Tage

My son is a little over 2.5 years old, he will be 3 in August. I've heard that they will sometimes not show a lot of interest in going to the potty but that you should just start trying sooner rather than later. We are only on day 4 but I am trying to leave him naked most of the day and when I'm not able to fully watch him, I put him in underwear. He peed on the potty a small amount on day two after starting to pee on the floor. I rushed him into the bathroom and he went a little more. Then finished going in the corner on the floor. Now today it seems like he knows not to go on the floor but instead he is just holding it and refusing to go on the potty. I've tried the little potty chair and a potty seat on the big potty. All he does now is just throw a fit! I know for a fact that if I put his underwear on he will go. So should I just keep trying or is he truly not ready to be potty trained yet?! Any and all advice will be much appreciated. Please be nice to me. TIA 🙏🏻🙏🏻

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

I would say to try letting him have more control over when he sits. It's ok if he holds it for long periods for a couple days. Just talk to him a lot about how his body feels and listening to that "full" feeling in his belly etc

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Alexis Malena

2 Tage

Hi! New to group

Today is day 1 of fully trying to potty training my 25 month old. (First and only child)

I am trying the “no pants” method. We started this morning and he’s already had 4 accidents with only 1 successful potty break 😊 no biggie it’s only 11:40am.

Any times on how to get through the first day? Any tips and tricks are welcome!

Natalie O'Connell

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Setting a timer to remind them and you helps a lot!

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Jennifer Sturgis

3 Tage

Hi new to the group here!! 😊

My daughter is 2yrs and is very very interested in pottery training. She comes with me to go and she always wants to sit on the toilet after me so I let her but nothing happens. Which I dont expect anything to happen. Today we are gonna try only wearing underwear, if I mentally can handle it lol. Any tips are appreciated! Somethings I've been doing with her is telling her when she goes of what is happening and reading to her on the potty to wait and see if anything will happen but thats pretty much it. Thanks in advance has an anxious mom of pottery training lol 😂

Kaylie Jo Dawn Carson

Also pouring water on her private area while on the toilet will help her trigger that pee response so u can get the idea that's what she suppose to do In the toilet make it rewarding and fun to go potty

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Megan Marquart

3 Tage

.

When my son pees it goes right in between the toilet seat and the toilet rim almost every single time and ends up all over his underwear, his pants, and the floor. I don't know if it's the potty seat we are using or our toilet seat that has too large of a gap or something. He points it down every time, but the angle is just perfect to jet right through the gap. Anyone else have this issue? Did you find a solution for this? Thanks!

Megan Marquart hat die Kommentarfunktion für diesen Beitrag deaktiviert.

Adrienne Slone

I had the same issue with a seat similar to this. I ended up getting the Babybjorn toilet seat off Amazon and haven't turned b... Mehr anzeigen

3 Tage

Teilen

CharmingPapaya9397

3 Tage

I need to praise my 29m old for a moment

We began potty training on Wednesday. Today is day 3. She is no longer doing small, sporadic pees on the potty every 20-30 minutes. She is learning her body's cues and fully emptying her bladder! We were doing underwear when we started, but she kept peeing in them and she asked to take them off so we are doing bare bottom and it's working!

We tried potty training a few months back and she was petrified to fully empty her bladder. Now she does it multiple times per day. I do need to be near her while she goes and she holds onto my legs, but that's comfort thing for her currently and I'm okay with that since she's learning. Yesterday she only had one pee accident and one poop accident (for day 2 I feel that's a huge win). In her defense, I was using the bathroom when she had to pee and couldn't help her get to the potty on time. I also didn't know she had to poop in that moment. I assumed she had to pee. Normally she'd say she had to poop when she wore diapers. I guess she was overwhelmed in the moment without a diaper. She jumped up off the potty and pooped on the floor next to the potty. I explained to her that poop goes in the potty, cleaned it up, and had her help me flush it. She was still so proud of herself for pooping and getting it close to the potty (and honestly, I was too because we've dealt with a few constipation issues over the past few months). Progress, not perfection!

This little girl has done a complete 180 from a few months ago and I'm so proud of her!

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

That's fantastic progress!! She doing wonderful! Great job to you too! ❤️❤️

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Jeanette Dahlgren

3 Tage

Day 3 potty training. My son has not had one accident and running to the potty every time, he also is staying dry overnight the past few days. Is this just a fluke or is he making this super easy for us?! 😂❤️ I'm so proud of him!!!

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Sometimes when they are really ready it just clicks! Is he in undies or bare bottom?

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

BravePear1032

3 Tage

How to transition from bare bottom to undies?

My daughter has been doing pretty well with going on the potty bare bottom. Poops are still kind of a struggle but as long as I catch her while she starts to go she'll usually go on the potty (at least so far). How can I transition her to undies? I put some on her yesterday so she could go outside, but she ended up peeing in them.

Also, how do we handle outings if needed?

Thanks in advance 🙏

Cyndi Hankins

What is this bare bottom method? Was going to try trainers n going every 30 min but she waits until I'm busy cooking then goes and the trainers dont have lines

2 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

3 Tage

I'm in a weird position where my 2yo tells me when he poops and immediately lays down for a diaper change, but has absolutely no clue when he pees (nor do I, no signs) and hates sitting on any potty for more than a few seconds, so I've never been able to have a successful potty run in either department. he's very interested in the potty and reads lots of potty training books. Should I wait longer?

(Also I'm 95% sure he's low interoception / adhd and really doesn't notice his body signals, his cousin was the same and potty training was a nightmare)

Anonymer Teilnehmer 953

If you're taking him to the big potty. Try getting a little potty for a different area because I had two failed attempts and my son has been doing better this time because we have a potty in the living area now.

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Mykenzie Gerow

Mitglied mit zunehmender Beteiligung

·3 Tage

Ariana Luther

Idk cuz mine is currently making fart noises with her mouth and my elbow

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

3 Tage

I've posted this question before, but not gotten the answers I'm looking for- so trying again.

Logistics for night time.

💩 I know there is no night time training per se.

💩 I know holding it during sleep is hormonal and not something that is trained.

💩 I know that holding it during sleep is maturity and takes time to happen on its own.

I'm not concerned with holding it while she sleeps, she wears a pull up. My question is-

If she wakes up and needs to pee during the night, how do you get her to get out of bed and use the toilet, rather than just pee in her pull up? Surely those of you whose kids eventually start to wake up dry got up at some point during the night to use the toilet- right? They're not holding it for 8+ hours? At some point in the beginning, are they doing this in a pull up?

Right now, when we are home she insists on us going potty with her, but does it on her own at school, so she can go to the toilet alone. (3 1/2 yr old)

Logistically, how do you get your kid to get out of bed and per during the night IF they wake up and have to go? And are they still wearing a pull up? I think ours just pees in her pull up since she knows she's wearing it- bc she does this sometimes right before bedtime during book time, rather than ask to go. She clearly knows that she is not wearing regular underwear. During the day, she is in underwear and asks to go.

I'm asking for your process to get them to get out of bed and pee when they wake up at night and feel the need to- and asking if they wear a pull up or underwear to bed during this process?

Kim Turner

My son cosleeps with me, so when I woke up in the morning before he woke up I checked his diaper. Once I noticed he was waking up dry consistently I took the diapers away cold turkey. He went to bed knowing he was wearing underwear and sleeps through the night. He doesn't wake to pee hardly ever. I make sure he goes pee before bed and remind him to go in the morning. If my son wears a pull-up to bed he pees in it out of laziness.

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Natalie O'Connell

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

·3 Tage

What are your potty training wins this week?

#usmnnetwork #pottytraining #toddlers

DelightfulPassionfruit8917

My son has actually been going multiple times a day in the potty!!! He still isn't verbally initiating (speech delayed) but the timer is working! We've been working on it for a year at this point

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Jaz Leon

3 Tage

My 2-year-old daughter and potty training regression

We started potty training on Tuesday. Before that, we had already been familiarizing her with the bathroom — she understands what it's for and even used her potty before bath time during the previous week.

But once we officially started (no more diapers), her behavior changed a lot. She seems to have regressed:

- She doesn't want to eat by herself anymore and wants me to feed her
- She wakes up multiple times at night
- She's in a bad mood
- She refuses to take naps
- She says she's scared of many things, even though we always support her with love

Honestly, I'm scared that I might be causing her some kind of trauma by potty training. I feel guilty seeing all these changes and fears.

Is this normal? Has anyone experienced something similar?

KayCee Hudman

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

My son was similar. I chalked it up to him not being ready. 🧑🏻

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Emily Camou

3 Tage

I need all the tips. We want to start potty training my 16 month old girls one is walking the other is not. Please send all your tips.

KayCee Hudman

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

What readiness signs are they showing? I would probably hold off on the one that isn't walking yet as they need to be able to get to the potty and manipulate clothing. Reading oh crap potty training was a game changer for me 🧡

"oh crap potty training" the book is audio or paper in most stores. I used audible but most libraries carry it as well. It's a bare bottom method but I feel like bare bottom was important for my kids to learn the feelings 🙄

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

3 Tage

Help...I'm feeling defeated 😞

My 3 year old daughter going to be 4 in May has been the hardest I mean the hardest potty training child EVER!!! I have been trying since she was 2yrs old, she didn't seem ready then so I backed off for a few months and tried again and again with no success ...now she is in a new daycare room where they cannot wear pull-ups. Which she is not bothered by, she will wear her big girl panties all day there even go on the potty 🚽. Until Yesterday ...she did not go potty at ALL the 6 hours she was there. She would go sit on the potty and "try" but no success 😞 when we got home she went and found a pull-up and put it on and peed till it was so full I thought it was going to blow 🌬️ then turned around and put her big girl panties back on 😞

Today she has been home all day with me and she wanted to wear her big girl panties, I made her go sit on the potty several times and try. Nope 🙅 no tinkle 😞

Then she went with my mom for a bit and did the same thing, would not go on the potty. But found a pull-up and put it on and peed in it! Mind you this was after she held her pee for 4 hours 😞

I'm at a loss ...we have told her that the diaper fairy 🦋 is coming soon and she will leave only her night time pull-ups. But I need help please 😞

I have tried all the little tricks of give them a prize, 3 days of commando etc...please help me and don't bash me!! She is a very strong willed child and I am not sure what to do ...I don't want her holding it to the point she hurts her self or gets an infection ...

Desperate mommy

Alexi Johnson

At this point it's a behavioral/control issue. She knows how to do it she is just being a toddler. Put away all the pull-ups where she can't get to them and only give her one at night. I wouldn't make her go sit on the potty because it makes it a control thing. You can ask her if she needs to go but if she says no just leave it at that. If she has an accident have her help you clean it, not in a punishment sort of way but just as a natural consequence. She may hold it for longer periods of time the first couple of days, it ks fine and normal. These strong willed children like to do that and use it to their advantage.

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Bearbeitet

Tamara Johannsen

·3 Tage

Months back my 2 year old was extremely interested in the potty so we tried and she started peeing on it. She did this at times for months so we thought we'd add underwear into the mix and try to take her more often. With underwear she peed once on the toilet and hasn't since. I can take her every half hour on the dot and she will pee in her underwear every time instead of on the potty and most of the time won't tell me she's wet. Very rarely will she say she needs to use the potty after she's wet. Shes a little over 2.5 now. I dont know what to do to get her to go again! Help!

KayCee Hudman

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

I feel like bare bottom is important in the beginning for them to truly understand the feelings and make the connections from "I peed" to "im peeing" and then with help from the parent they can connect feelings to get "i need to pee" 🧑🏻 I used the oh crap method and loved it for my boy 🙌

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Arrie Glover

3 Tage

Any tips for doing poos in the potty?

We have been training for about 3 weeks now and are in undies during the day with a sleep nappy at night time however she seems to know when she's going to do a poo however goes and hides and does it in her undies most of the time. First 2 weeks we got about 3 poos in potty but she freaked out when she seen the poo asking what is that. She's 2 and a half for context. I think it feels a bit scary for her. What wording are we using to encourage them to do poos on the potty?

KayCee Hudman

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

We sometimes would sing let it go for my son. For my son we used the oh crap method and didn't have any poo accidents while naked. When we added underwear it felt too much like a diaper for my boy and hed poo in them. I put him in loose sweats that are tight on the ankle. He pooped his pants and the turd fell down to his ankle. He really didn't like the feeling. We cleaned him up and I explained that he needs to use the potty. He makes sure he makes it to the potty now 🧑🏻

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

3 Tage

.

I want to potty train my 19month old daughter but I don't know where to start or how to do it any tips?

KayCee Hudman

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Reading oh crap potty training was a game changer for me 🧡 "oh crap potty training" the book is audio or paper in most stores. I used audible but most libraries carry it as well. It's a bare bottom method but I feel like bare bottom was important for my kids to learn the feelings 🧡

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Taylor Miller

3 Tage

My 3 year old boy is doing great going pee on the potty, i have been doing the naked method and he does so good with it, but as soon as i put underwear on him he'll poop in them or sometimes pee in them and it doesn't bother him.. his preschool teacher told me to send him back to school after spring break (ends monday) in underwear but i'm nervous because he doesn't do well unless he's naked. has anyone else had this problem with the naked method and underwear?

Courtney Welch

I personally recommend the upairy underwear when at this stage (for boys put them on backwards, more coverage). But if daycare is willing to work with you I'd go lose shorts/pants first!

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Anonymer Teilnehmer

3 Tage

My daughter recently turned three and she absolutely refuses to go poop on the potty. She's pretty much pee trained (at least at home) but she will hold number two until she has a pull-up on (for naps or bedtime) or if we leave the house, or she will just go in her panties and then immediately start crying and screaming. If we pick her up and take her to the potty, she will scream and throw the biggest tantrum. We have tried everything for positive reinforcement like candy, snack, snacks, little prize toys, and I even told her she could pick out a new toy at target if she goes in the potty and she still refuses to go. It has been weeks and we are still at a loss and are trying not to get frustrated with her, but it's so hard. Has anyone gone through this with their littles or something similar/if so I will take all the advice or suggestions at this point!

Alysa Duenas-Morales

My daughter was the exact same way ... and it turned out for her she hated going poop because she was constipated! And hated sitting there and pushing .. started a laxative gummy ... we did the sit on potty with tablet for starting and if she went we gave reward i did Hershey kisses for small poop, big poops we took her to her favorite spot and that was all the motivation she needed

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Hailey Jacobsgaard

• Folgen

3 Tage

.

Hailey Jacobsgaard

3 Tage

.

I need all the potty training tips and tricks! Bubs just turned 4 and still just absolutely loses his mind about the potty. He says he's scared of the potty, screams and cries if I mention trying or even just wearing undies or being naked instead of a diaper. Toys and treats are not incentives to him, he couldn't care less about anything of the sort. I've got him on the potty a couple times lately but he just sits so long it ends up hurting his butt and wants off. When I can get him into undies he holds it for hours even if we go to the potty, until he eventually has an accident. He needs to be FULLY trained before he can start school. 🙄

Ellen Murphy

Just take away the diapers let him get wet a few times in his clothes. He is fully aware of he does not have sen needsand there's no medical problems just get rid of the diapers. U control the supply of diapers not him.nyay e can stand at toilet and pee in he doesn't need to sit on the potty. He's aged out of using a potty. Put one of those targets that ight up when his pee hits it. Ur just gonna hv to show tough love for his benefit in the long run

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Brooklyn Miranda

• Folgen

3 Tage

.

My two year old is fully potty trained!!

I'm so happy to share that my 2 year old is fully potty trained! We just threw the diapers out entirely and went straight for undies. She waits or goes while we are out and even wakes up at night to potty! So proud of my little girl who's gotten so big

Anonymer Teilnehmer 740

How can I start

But the problem is he does not tell me the signs of peeing or wanting to poop

2 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Chloe Houghton

3 Tage

I have a little boy who will be three in may and a daughter who turned 2 in march I need all the tips I've tried going naked but we leave to often for that and my son thinks it's just funny to pee on furniture on purpose but I know my son is ready he tells me when he poops his pants and he knows when he has to pee he just refuses to tell me he also doesn't care to sit in it if I put underwear on him he will pee in them and not care so... Mehr anzeigen

Elizabeth Carlson

Needs consequences for peeing on items other than the toilet. Take away privileges and significant toys. Don't let him get away... Mehr anzeigen

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Anastasia Lieng

3 Tage

Any on the go stuff you guys recommend I get for my toddler ? 🍌

Chavelita Alfaro

• Folgen

3 Tage

Hello mommas!

We've been potty training for 2 weeks now and I wanna say she's 90% trained on peeing in the toilet but not the pooping 😬 she has only pooped 1 time other times have been accidents 😭 what can i do to help her ??? Any suggestions?

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Pooping can take some time to master so I wouldn't stress too much.

Is she aware of the need to go?

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Arianna Kootz Pyrtle

3 Tage

Okay so how are we going on road trips during potty training? Husband and I are going to visit my in laws for the weekend, it's a 6 1/2 hr car ride. We've been potty training since 18m with a 3 month break in between. She's 2 1/2 and has been in underwear for a little over a month. She's only told my husband ONE time when she had to go, other than that she doesn't tell us so we just have to guess and constantly take her potty, even as... Mehr anzeigen

Jamie Lynn

We do pull ups over undies for quite awhile. ... Mehr anzeigen

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

Emily Harrelson

3 Tage

.

My 2 year old boy turns 3 next month and is day potty trained but we still have night time diapers that he fills. What do yall recommend for night time potty training? We are struggling!

Theresa Fisher

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Night time unfortunately can not be trained as it has to do with hormones growth, bladder size, how deep of a sleeper the todd... Mehr anzeigen

3 Tage

Antworten

Teilen

DelightfulPassionfruit8917

3 Tage

My 3 year 7 month autistic son has peed FOUR times today in the potty!!We're finally making progress! I was starting to think he'd never get it. I could cry!!

Lyz Cordero

Share your ways! My daughter's the same age also autistic and we have been struggling although she has started telling us afte... Mehr anzeigen

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Sarah Schiewer

3 Tage

So thrown here. Im sure this is like 99% of cases on here, but I am so stumped.

My 3.5 year old started potty training 3 months ago using Big Little Feelings. She was doing great for so long.

She would let us know when she needed to pee AND poop (I know right?) Then all of a sudden she's flat refusing to tell us she needs to go. We ask her multiple times and its always "no". We're trying to foster autonomy and listening to her own b... Mehr anzeigen

Sunflower-butterfly89

It sounds like a control thing but the peeing on couches and on your laps is a little out there.

You sure nothing traumatic has happened?

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Jess Ensby

3 Tage

.

Toilet training Regression

Hi mummas ❤️

My daughter is almost 3 and was having no accidents, I thought toilet trained through the day.

The last week has progressively gotten worse every day. She isn't even mentioning she needs a wee or saying she is doing them, I'm just finding them or she is playing and I will watch her just start weeing, no queues or signs she is going to start weeing. She is hardly using the toilet at this point.

I'm not sure if this is a normal thing they go... Mehr anzeigen

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

Regardless of the stress, just dad not being around anymore can cause regression. It's hard to say in this case what would hel... Mehr anzeigen

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen

Shannon Ashley

3 Tage

My son is 3 he just turned 3 last month on the second. I have been trying to potty train him since he was 2. He will go on the potty sometimes but not all the time when we are home. But when we are out and about he will tell me he has to go potty and will go. He only pees on the potty he pooped once and that is it. How do I get him to poop on the potty and go pee consistently on the potty.

Margo Billings-Garrett

Admin

Mitglied mit herausragender Beteiligung

What method are you using? Is he in undies at home?

3 Tage

Antworten
Teilen