everyone else's kid seems ahead...

Potty training is the absolute worst. If I could've hired someone to do it, I would've.

I hear people complain about potty training being the most stressful week of their lives. Try living it for three years.

Being judged because my son isn't potty trained.

We have a 3 year old and it feels like we have been potty training forever.

We have tried everything but still it feels like we're in the same spot as we were over a year ago.

it's been a disaster pretty much since he turned 3.

I know regressions are normal but this regression is going on 6 months now.

He'll come home from daycare having gone through multiple pairs of pants.

he is unbothered by pee.

prompting him to go will result in a major meltdown.

My toddler is impossible to potty train.

Potty training days are BORING.

Potty Training is Killing Me and Ruining My Marriage.

F*CK POTTY TRAINING.

Greetings from hell.

I hate potty training.

potty training is the worst thing i've experienced so far in parenthood.

I have a girl. She gives ZERO effs about being wet.

Potty training is a level of hell for sure.

potty training has had me debating whether or not i want another kid.

potty training might be mine and my partner's demise.

She is SO stubborn.

I love my daughter man but she will not catch on.

All of my friends are successfully potty training their toddlers that are younger than her and I'm so over it.

My son is almost 4 and isn't potty trained.

The comments I've received from my friends and family were disgusting.

People assumed I hadn't even tried. I had. Trust me.

I actually deleted a Reddit account due to the judgement I got from my struggles.

I got all kinds of pressure from my MIL and my own mother.

I've spent thousands on occupational therapy and potty training consultants.

My son can't go to school.

My doctor is completely dismissive.

My partner is furious at me that she isn't potty trained.

I feel like I'm losing my mind.

Potty training makes me feel like an inadequate useless piece of crap.

seeing all of the posts here and in fb groups about 2 year olds who are already potty trained has me discouraged and concerned.

It's horrible. Worst part of parenting by far.

Potty training without success is so frustrating and disheartening.

I'm embarrassed anytime I walk in that school and I get looks from the office ladies while I get my son and change him.

I feel bad for getting embarrassed but I do.

I hate that I don't know how to help my baby.

Sorry, I'm just ranting because I don't have anywhere else to turn to about this.

I'm starting to feel ashamed when other parents see his diaper poke out of his pants at the playground.

This is getting ridiculous and I feel like a failure.

my husband and I getting frustrated and we made her feel pressure and she associated the potty with a bad thing.

The biggest hindrance for me was the frustration.

I feel so defeated and stressed out.

When I talk to friends and family about it they say their usual stuff it's gonna be okay blah blah blah.

Nothing helps.

I am a bad parent.
